THE W. T. WOODSON
HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY

THE SPRING OF OUR LIVES

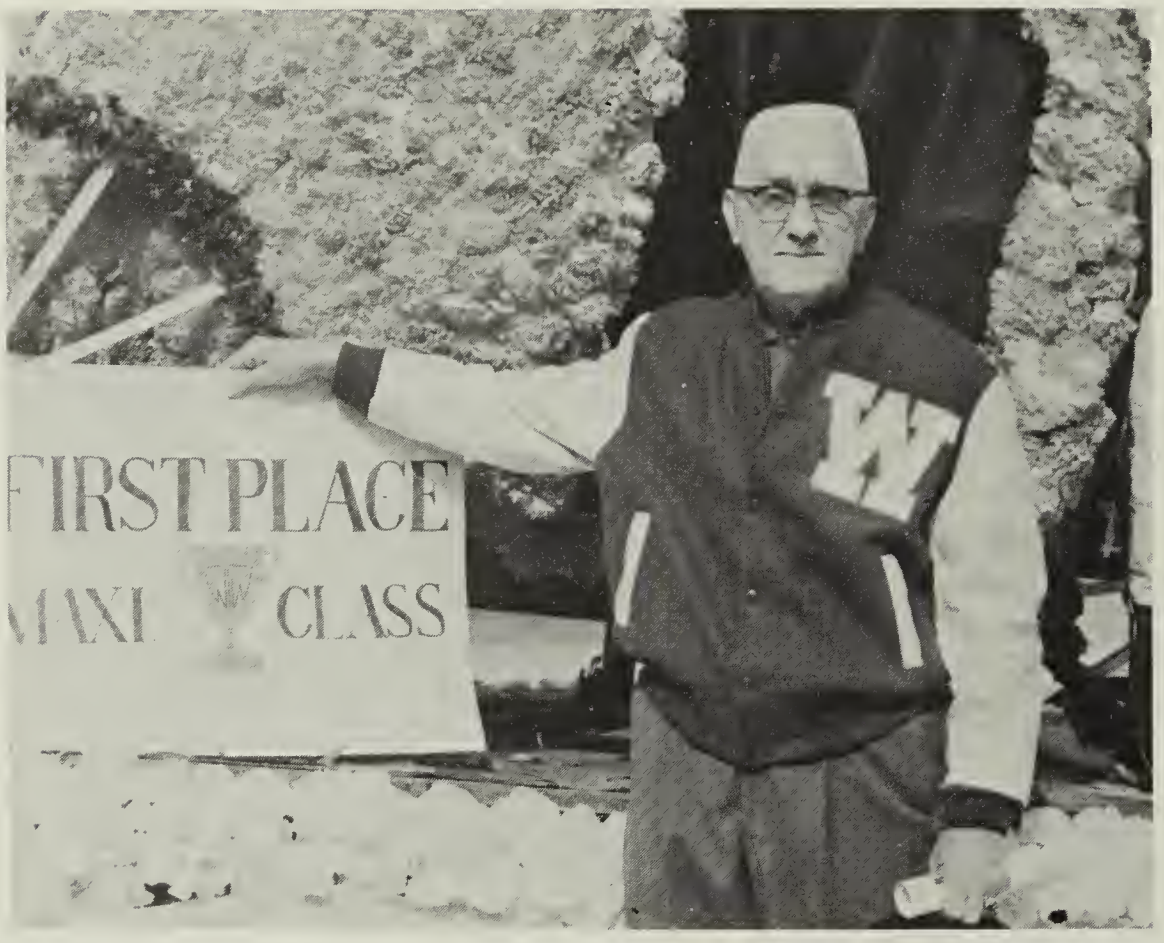

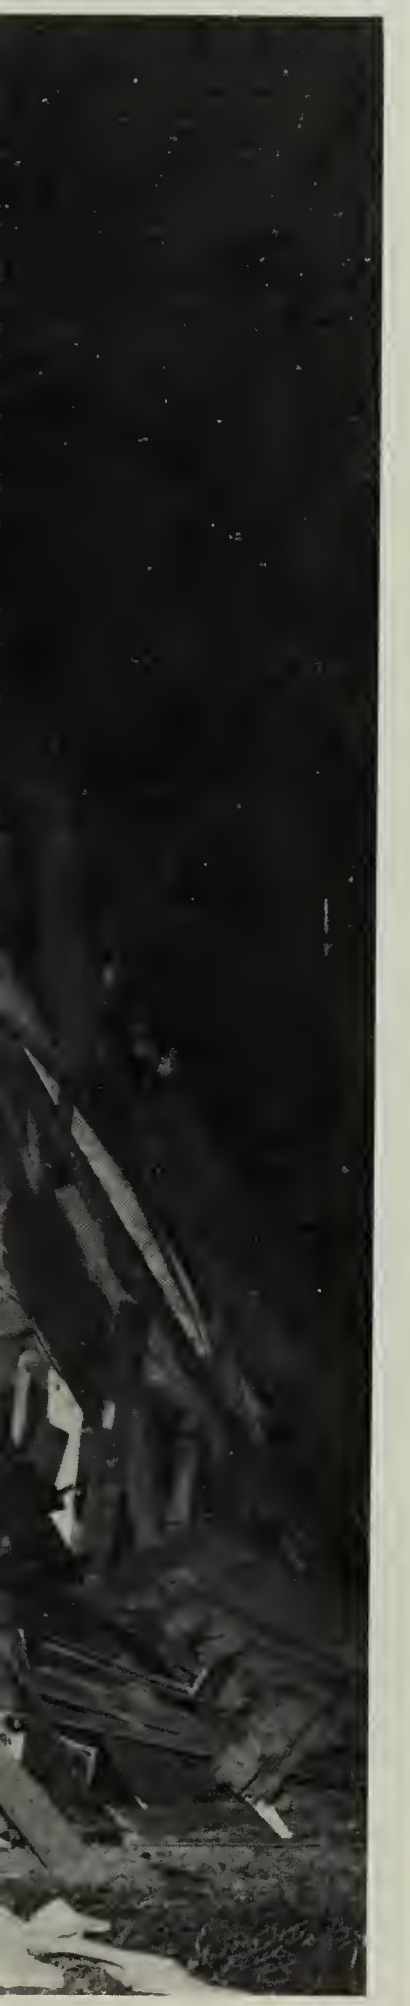

Freshmen poured through the open doors of W. T. Woodson, eager to become a part of the Woodson Way, and reluctant to do it alone. Lost in a maze of hallways and a sea of strange faces, they struggled to find something familiar.

The guiding lights of life: Character, Scholarship, Leadership, and Service.

W. T. Woodson's student body strived to work as a team. Each student competed in the game of life struggling to achieve his particular goal. Acquired skills, sportsmanship, and self-discipline helped guarantee a successful future.

With an air of informality, students of the vocational department engineered their abilities in practical and creative directions.

Resembling the start of the Grand Prix the parking lot cleared at 3:16.

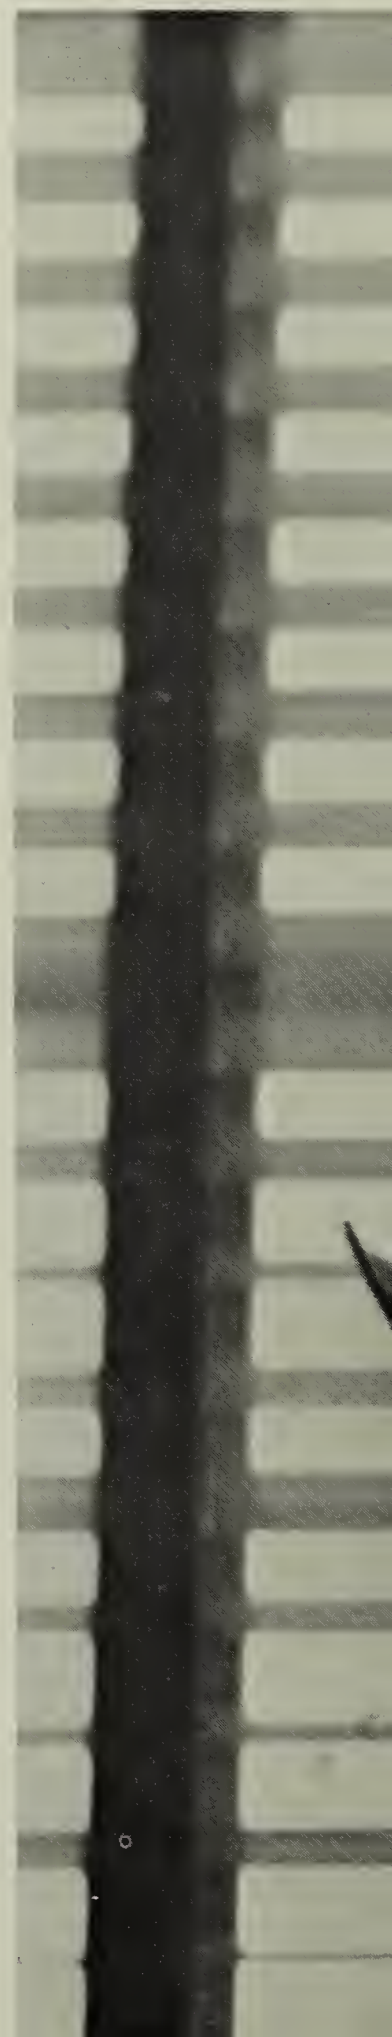

As each grading period came to an end, students could be seen cramming for last minute tests and praying for a second of relaxation. Finally the work was turned in, papers were evaluated, and the final grade was then computed. Days later, reluctant students waited patiently to receive their marks of achievement.

The voice of our elected leader was not that of an individual, but that of the student body. Woodson strived to uphold the Democratic tradition, giving all students the privilege of being a part of the Woodson Way.

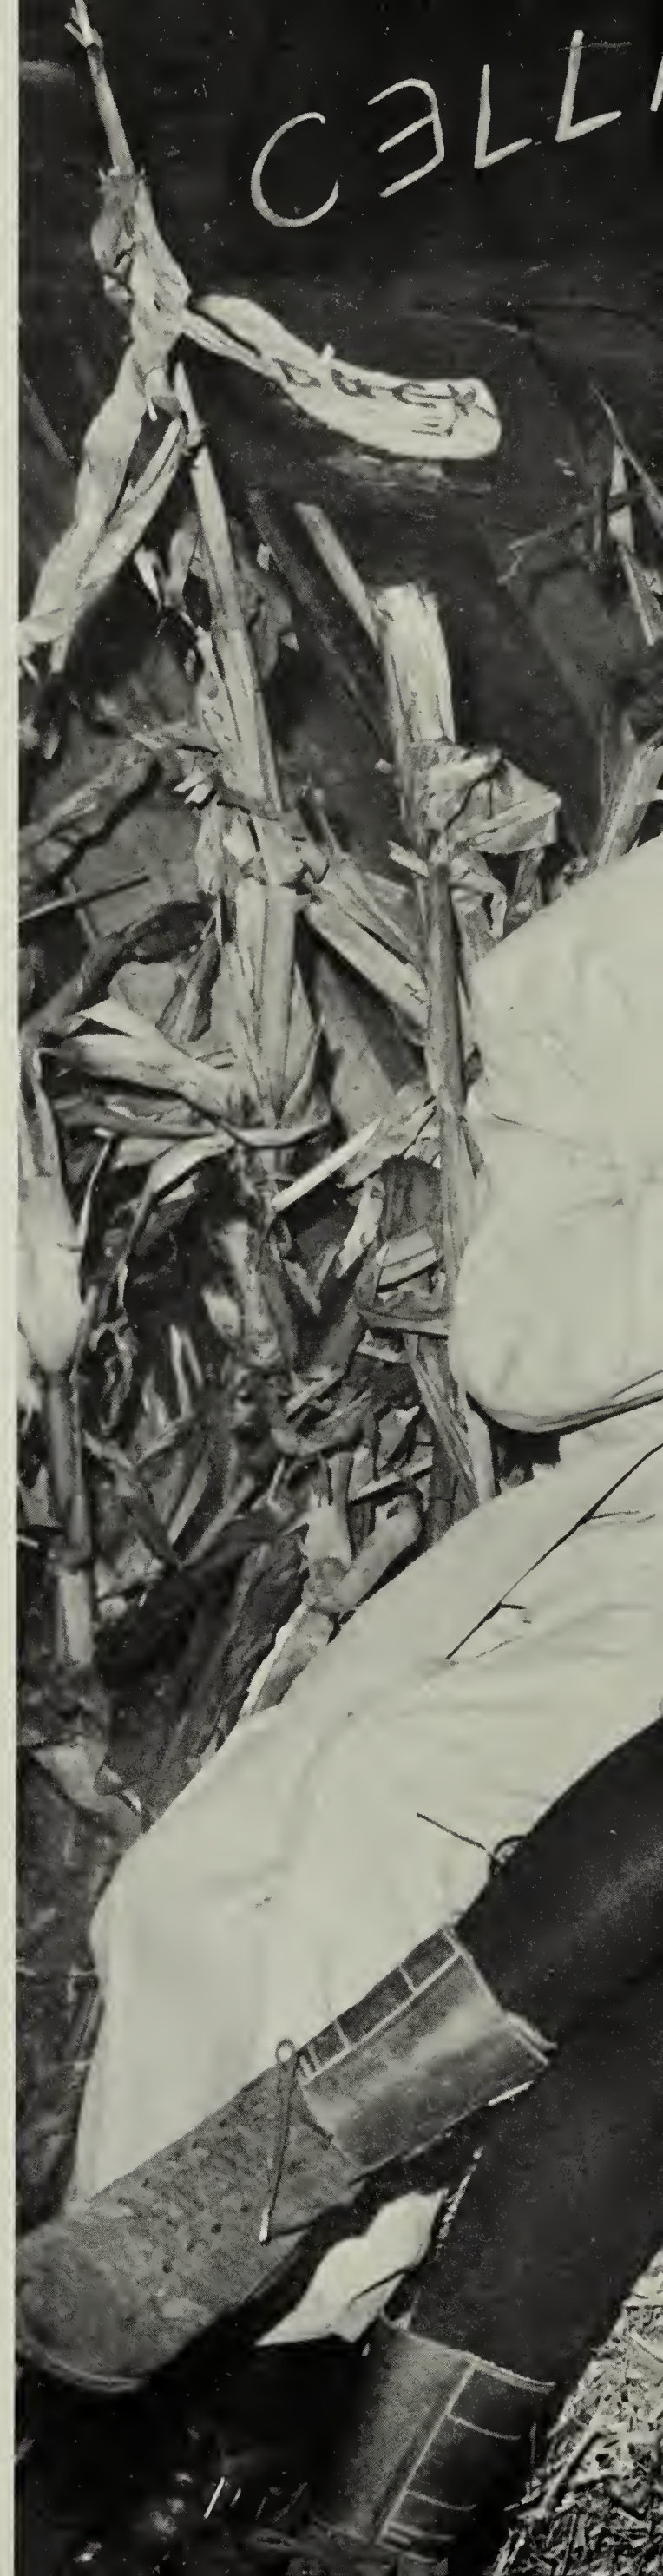

From a stiff metal tube filtered the pliant, alive tones of a creator . . . creating from silence, the sound of music.

Graceful communication . . .
A pensive pose,
A soul searching expression.

STUDENT LIFE

Another day and still another and then another year.
How slowly passed each individual moment, how swiftly passed the whole.
We all remembered the first day but not three days ago.
We get lost in a swirl of faces we knew, or didn't know or perhaps only half-knew, and settled into the rhythm of things.
Each after school activity, each dance, each sore throat after a football game added to the consciousness and personality of each member of W. T. Woodson's four classes.
We were entertained, stimulated, and broadened by the many events that made-up a Cavalier's school year.

Eating cotton candy, a Cavalier fan, Pris Craig, may be thinking about warm summer nights, the advent of school, or our next football victory.

Tops, an institution of teenage dates, gets a rest after a long summer of feverish activity that is disrupted by after-football traffic early in September. Hungry Woodson fans thrive on Top's french fries and hamburgers.

67-68 year opened with zest incomparable in our history

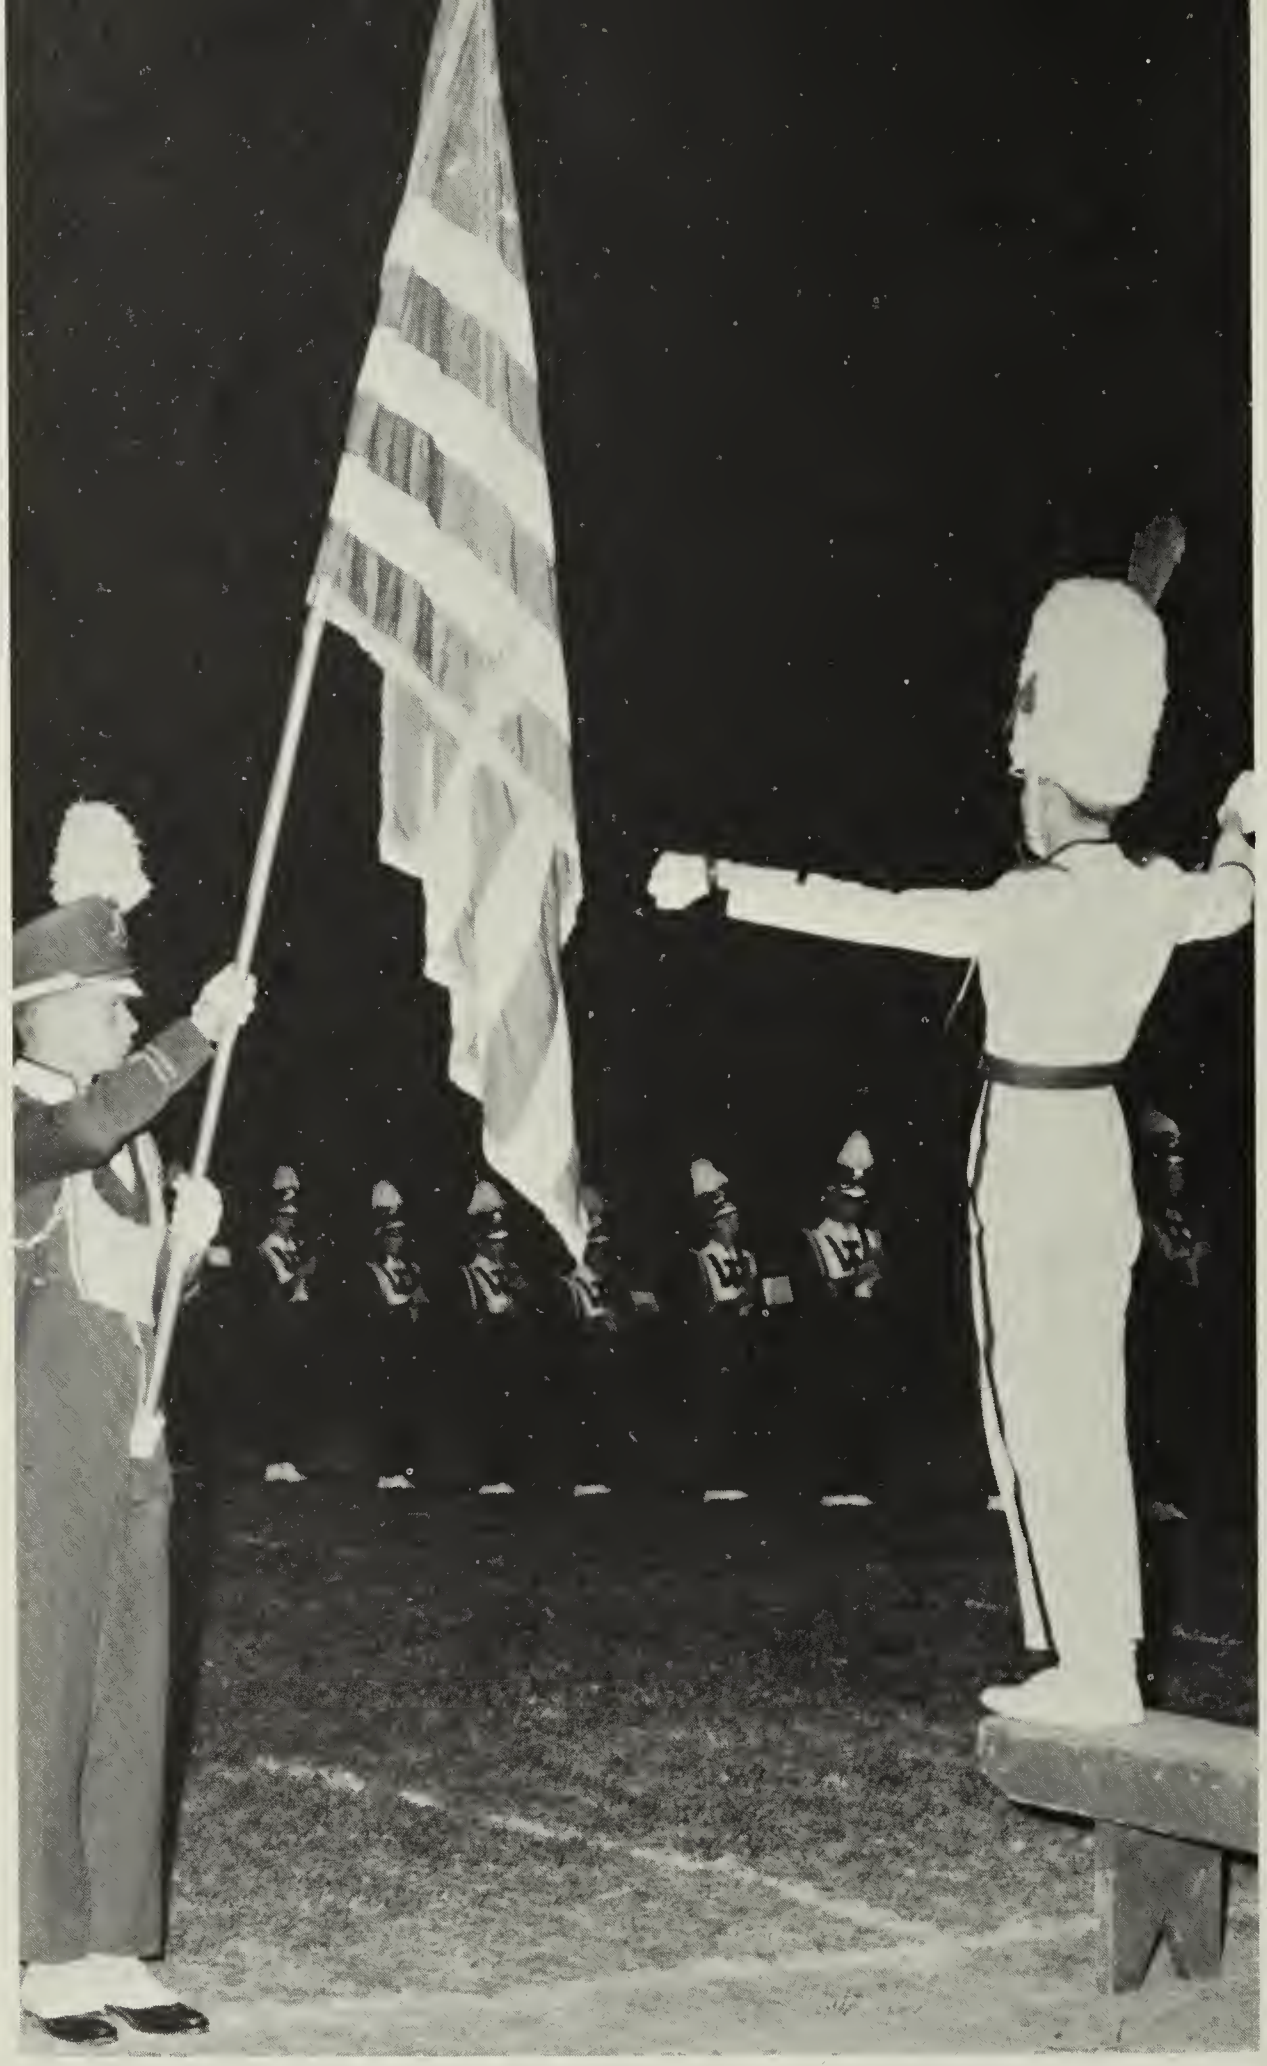

Miriam Nunez, our exchange student from Ecuador, dressed in her native costume, smiles prettily for Cavalier photographers. Miriam is living with Woodson Senior, Cathy Bozarth.

Mr. Deal completes the pattern of school ritual common to the first few weeks of school by taking underclassmen pictures. Jacob Wilson struggles to suppress a smile while posing for two photographers.

With a flourish, Steve Doub conducts the Woodson band's half-time performance as Billy Weston presents the American flag.

Led by Diane Bacus, the Cavalettes, twirling red flags, dress up W.T.W.'s half-time show, as the Cavalier band plays a spirited tune.

Joanne Light, Woodson's miniature cheerleader and mascot show signs of dishevelment during an exhaustive afternoon of cheering.

Roaring crowds whipped Cavaliers on to each new victory

Cathy Selph's cheers reverberate through the fire-warmed air, creating a spirited atmosphere for participators of Homecoming's Pre-game festivities.

Below: After intercepting a pass in the decisive Annandale game, Steve Zigler receives the congratulations of Allan Patton and Drew Conoway, but none of them, including Jeff McGary ever take their eyes from the game.

Karen Rhinehart and Jim Lawrence actively enjoy the much-praised band, the Nightcaps, in Cafeteria A, magically transformed by the Senior Class.

Confetti and crysanthemums decked Homecoming crowd

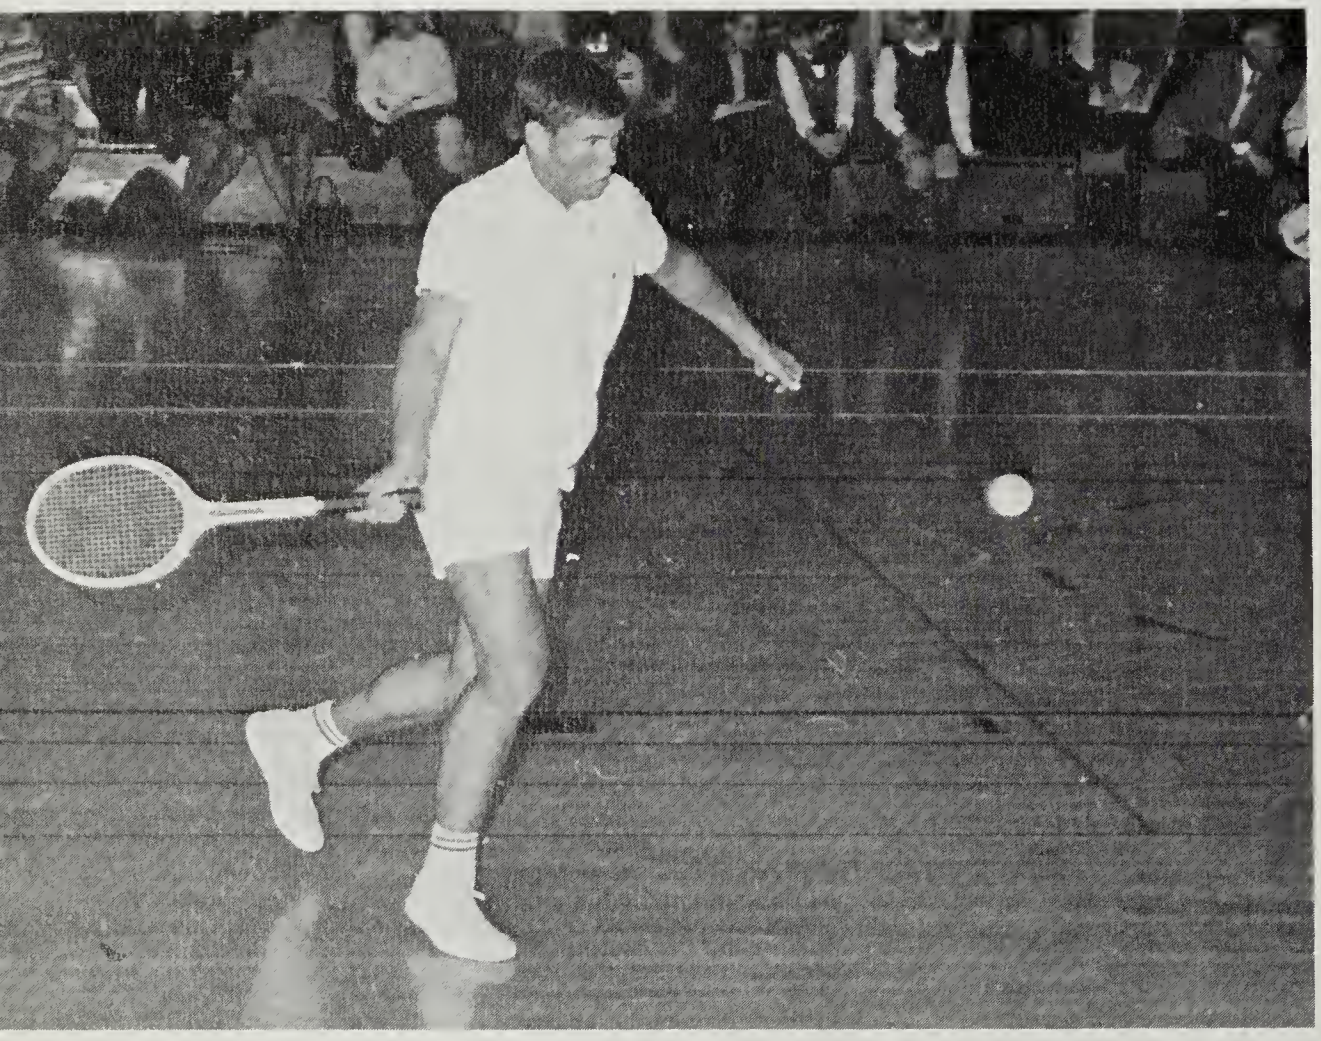

The Senior float, consisting mainly of paper flowers, made by the hands of many diligent Seniors won first place in the float contest.

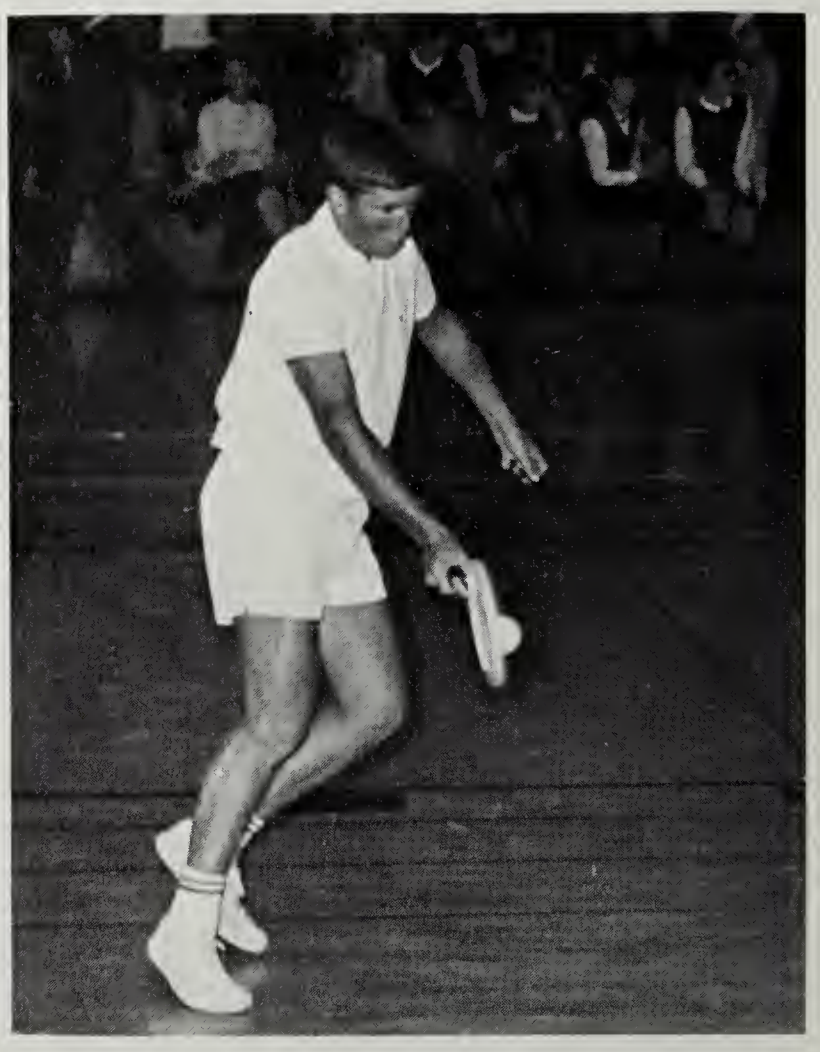

Homecoming's pre-game bonfire illuminated the sky and sent spectator's scurrying to within the circle of its warmth. The bonfire climaxed the festivities at the celebration, which included the procession of floats.

The annual magazine drive, directed by Student Government, brought with it pep assemblies, a myriad of prizes for outstanding salesmanship, and much needed income.

Alain MacDonald, from Australia, came to Woodson with Junior Tennis Champions from all over the world and entertained Woodsonites at an assembly and tennis exhibition. Here, he demonstrates his forehand swing.

Assemblies relieved class boredom

with business and pleasure

Mr. Habush spoke and showed slides on the Holy Land to the enlightenment of many students at a Fine Arts Assembly.

Girls proved able-bodied conquerors at Sadie Hawkins

Steve Doub, assisted by Connie Drysdale, performs the sacred marriage ceremony for many Dogpatch couples.

Leaning against a corn stalk cut from their own field, Jim Friel and Kathy Duley represent the richer faction of Dogpatch U.S.A.

Pat Lee, alias L'il Abner, is apprehended by Fairfax County policemen for drinking at a respectable social gathering at Woodson.

Every square inch of floor space is occupied as the girls drag their partners onto the dance floor.

Dick Price helps Chris Fierke up from the abyss of the Cellar Door where refreshments were served.

John Bevis plotted to hang Mike Black as he hung Woodson's Christmas wreath. Bruce Grahm took pictures for the SCA scrapbook.

Above: Homeroom 248 won the prize for the "Most Artistic" door. The door was done in blue and silver foil and carried through the theme of "Christmas is . . ." beautifully.

Below: Don Tepper encountered an inquiring dog as he leaves the home he had been fixing up for a Woodson cafeteria worker after her former residence burned down. Making this house livable was part of Woodson's Christmas project.

Christmas elves colored Woodson red, green, and cheerful

Mrs. Rowland gave Jim Cook a broad grin that could only mean thanks to all the Cavaliers who turned out to help work on her new home. This was the most successful part of the Christmas drive.

"Christmas is a Prayer for Peace" received grand prize in the SCA door decorating contest for best interpretation of the overall theme, "Christmas is . . ."

Rita Russell served punch, in front of the longest Christmas card in history. The Christmas card stretched across one wall of Cafeteria and contained the name of every student at W. T .Woodson.

Backed by a mural of lovable toys and canopied by red and green streamers, the much acclaimed band, Sonny and the Shadows, played its way into the souls of their listeners.

Eric Charltan and his assistant hold the road sign showing Boga-Go-Go as the place of Extravaganza's highlight, "An Enchanted Evening," by the Choralettes and Choraliers.

Fingers flying, this band entitled their number "Stage"-Band? There's one Leaving in Five Minutes."

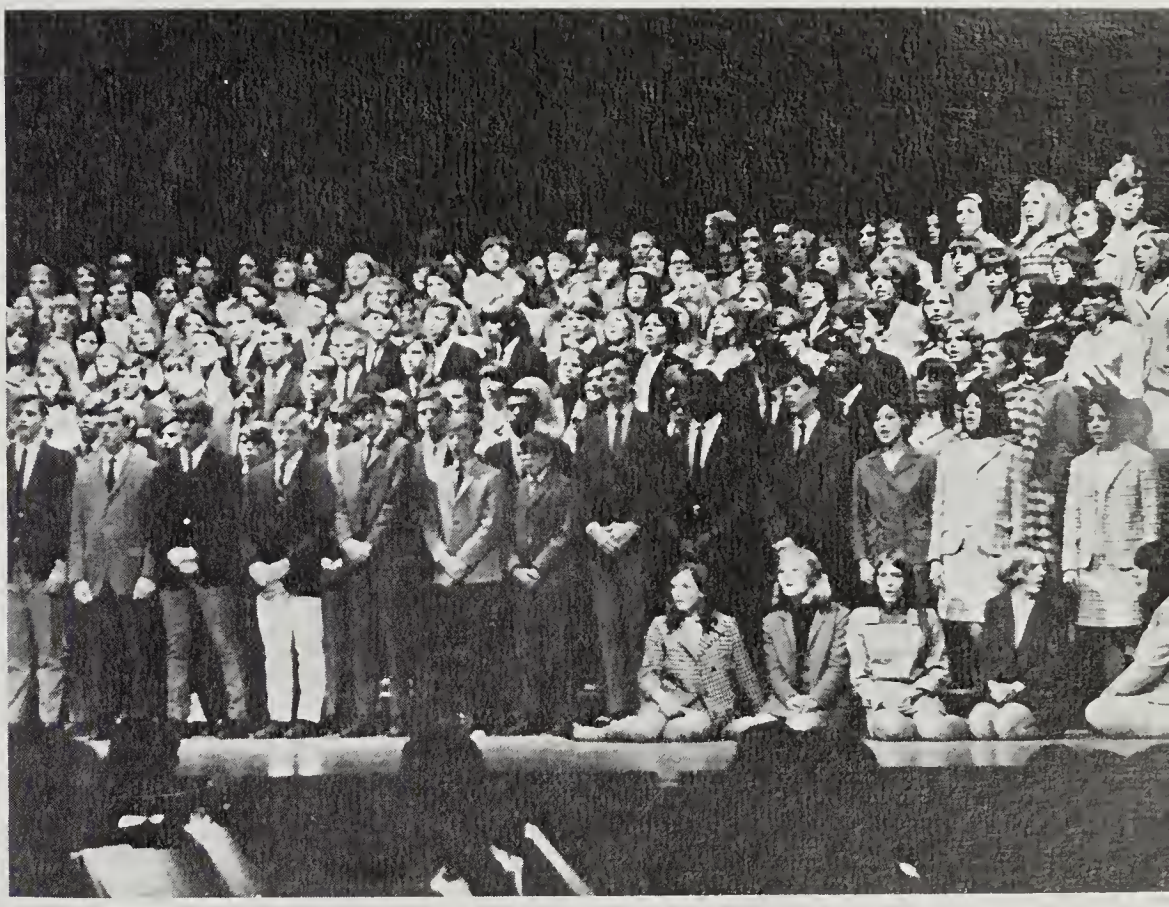

"The Good Ship Pantaloon" wobbled through on the last high notes of the Treble Choir.

Extravaganza's fun and song spilled over into the audience

ıt: The combined choruses had lung-power ıgh to send any heart soaring as the melodies ·ged. Left: The set design for "What's New" songs imaginative interest.

The "Old Woman in the Shoe," played beautifully by Diane Muche, provided a realistic subject for present day audiences.

"An Evening in Camelot"

swung to the music of the Pendletons

In a true Camelot setting, Susan Parry was crowned queen and these princesses brightened the room: Barbara Brannan, Jane Hofelich, Joanna Prickett, Debbie Toole, Diane Bacus, Pat Davis, Linda Morales, and Kim Crandall.

Barefooted sweethearts danced to the sound of the Pendletons, a band complete with go-go girls and a saxophone.

Janet Wilke shimmers in the completely golden outfit that caused a sensation at the dance, as others rock under the stars and under the castle walls of Camelot.

The lead parts in the Senior Class Musical, "Pajama Game," are played by Bill White, Sid; Kathy Rector, Babe; Bernadette Laraia, Gladys; and Whit Hollis, Hines. Supporting roles by Cheryl Evans, Mabel; Jon Fagan, Hassler; and Jim Friel, Prez.

Dancers led by Gary Moore were: Janet McClurkin, Sharon Graybher, Linda Lawrence, Carol Haynes, Bev Gould, Carl Galleagos, Khristine Becker, Tom Bates, Anne Marie Howell, Randy Reynolds, John Kelleher, Steve Douglas, and Jim Eger.

Indifference and enthusiam varied with each production

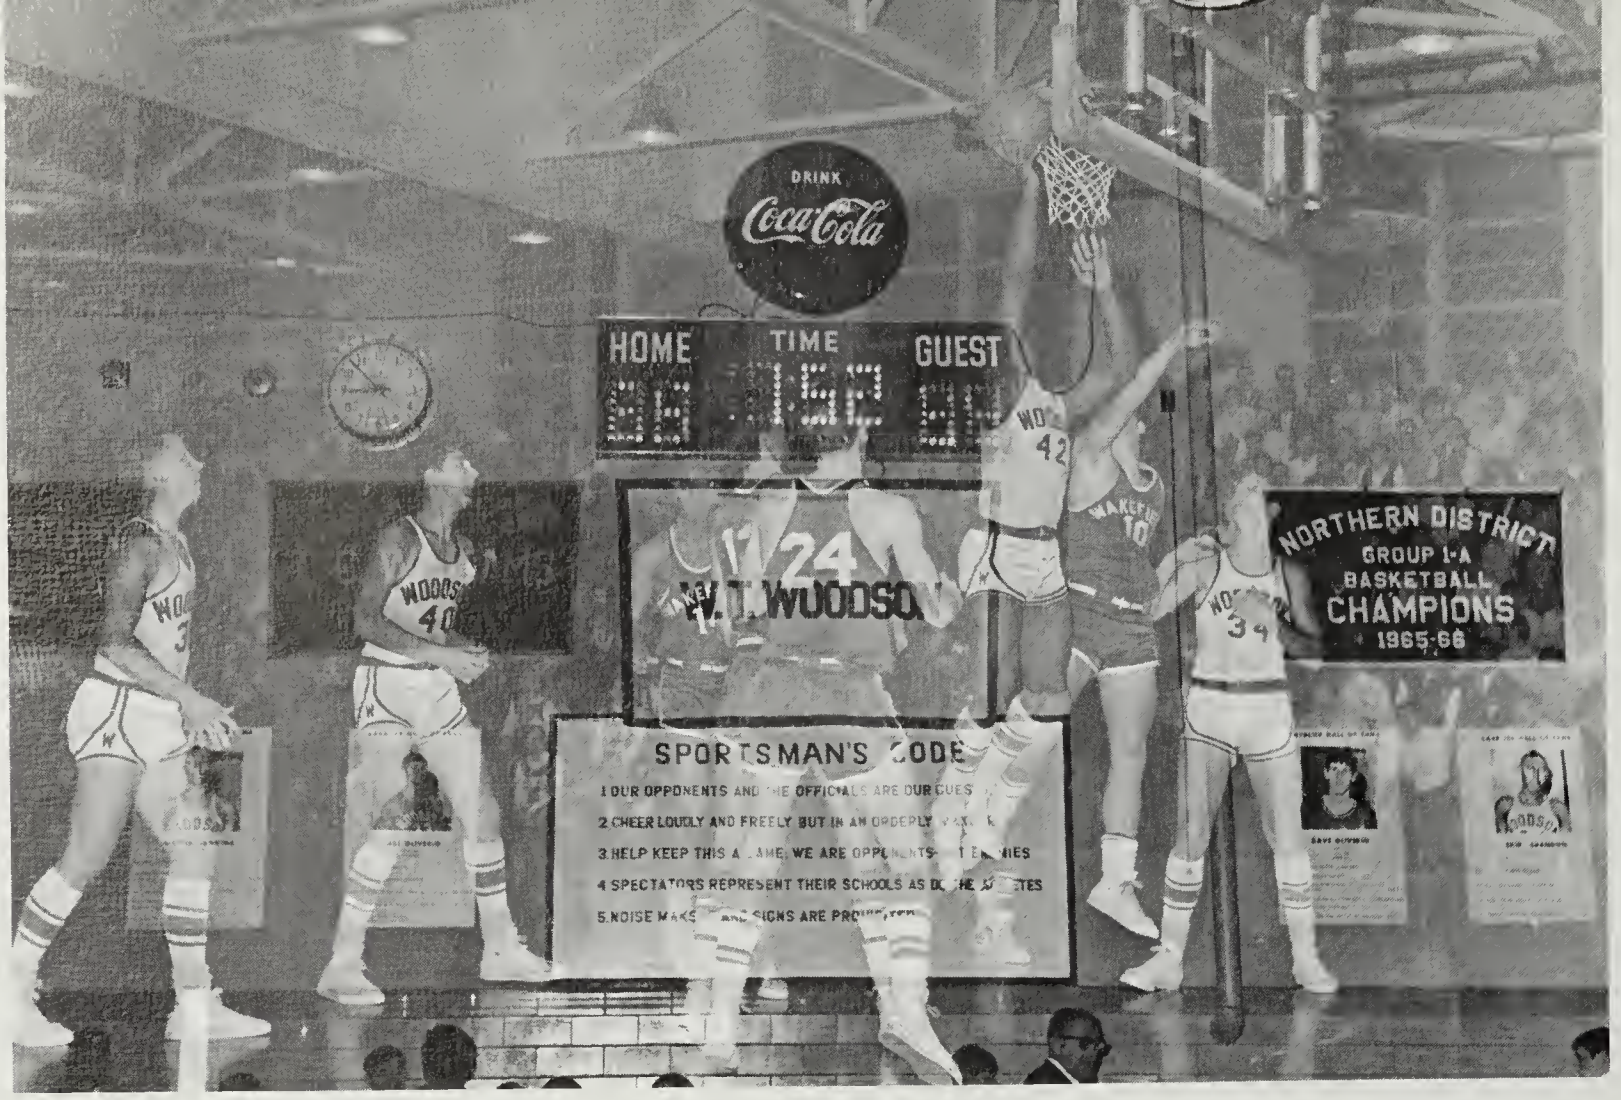

Top: Chad Kelso, Clancy; Joanna Prickett, Molly; and Bernadette Laraia, Linda; acted in the story centered around a college girl, Molly, and her life. Bottom: Carol Smith, Barbara Stahl, Joanna Prickett, Jon Fagan, John Linden, Chris Hoffman, Mike Pratt, and Dan Gift acted along with Chris Bird, Father; Wendy Jones, Mother, and Lynn Fitzjerald, Liz.

Woodson's Drama Club presented "Take Her, She's Mine" in which Barbara Stahl played the effervescent, sarcastic Adele.

The tenseness of a tie score, past history and a sportsman's code to live up to, little time, and a crowd, accounted for the anxiety on the players' faces as Jim Jukes goes up for a basket.

The Baton Corps entertained at a basketball pep assembly. It was found that Woodson students needed no urging to loudly support their team.

Screams, whistles, and stomping feet accompanied all games

Top: These boys caused near hysteria among their fans during games such as, the Stuart game, won in the last three overtime seconds. Bottom: Jack Davis, "Voice of the Cavaliers," and Bob Hagan, timekeeper, scorekeeper, bus driver, and cigar smoking friend to all Cavalier sports teams are pictured here.

Jim Jukes outjumped a taller opponent to shoot, as all eyes in the crowd silently guided the ball in a path toward the basket.

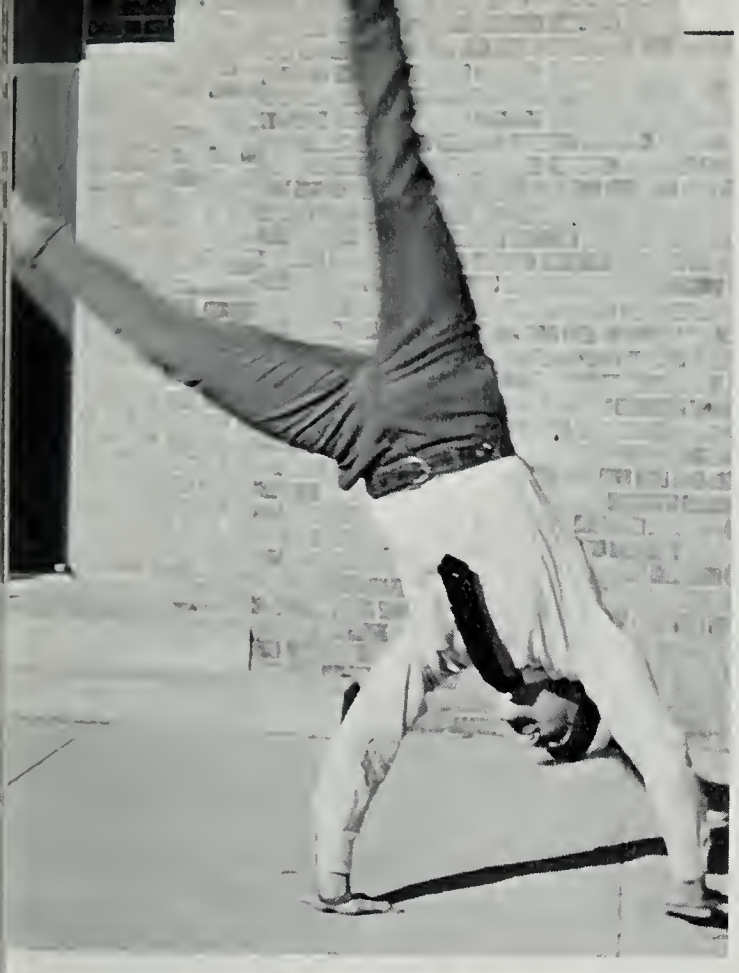

Spring brought rain, joy, and reflection

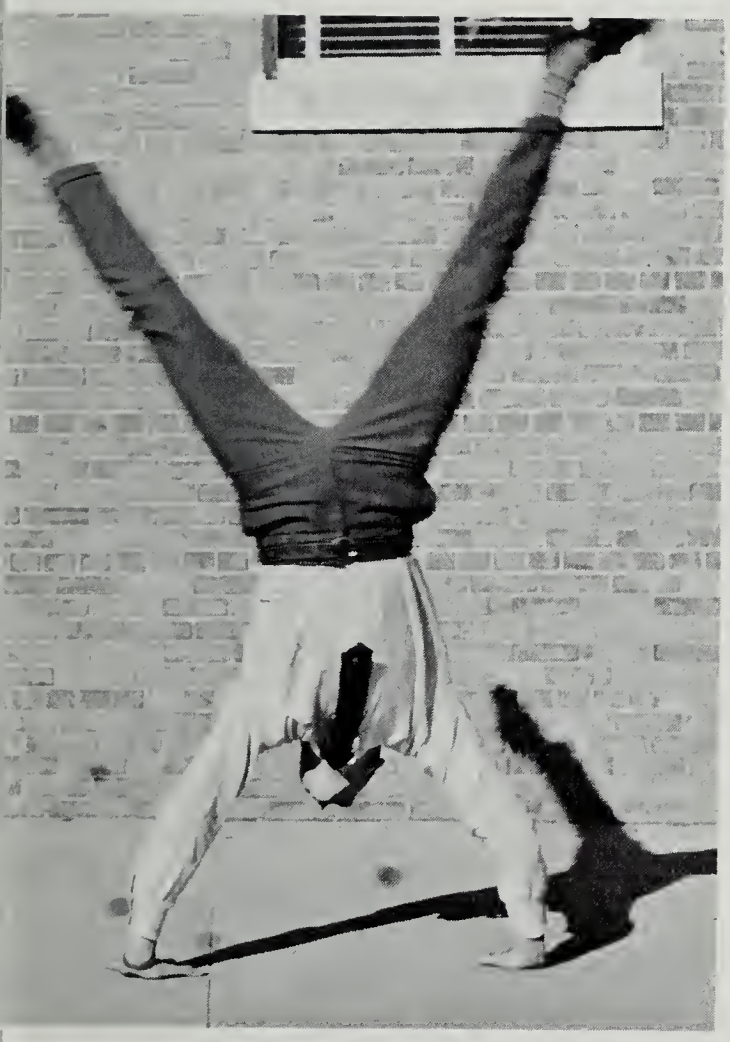

David Lange put up his umbrella to shield himself from a spring rain fall as for others tears fell as graduation approached.

Spring weather appealed to Art LaGarde and Nancy Strang as they enjoyed that ancient and difficult art of playing Cat's Cradles. Don Fishburn and Jeanne Feagan simply enjoyed the sun on a new beautification item, a stone bench.

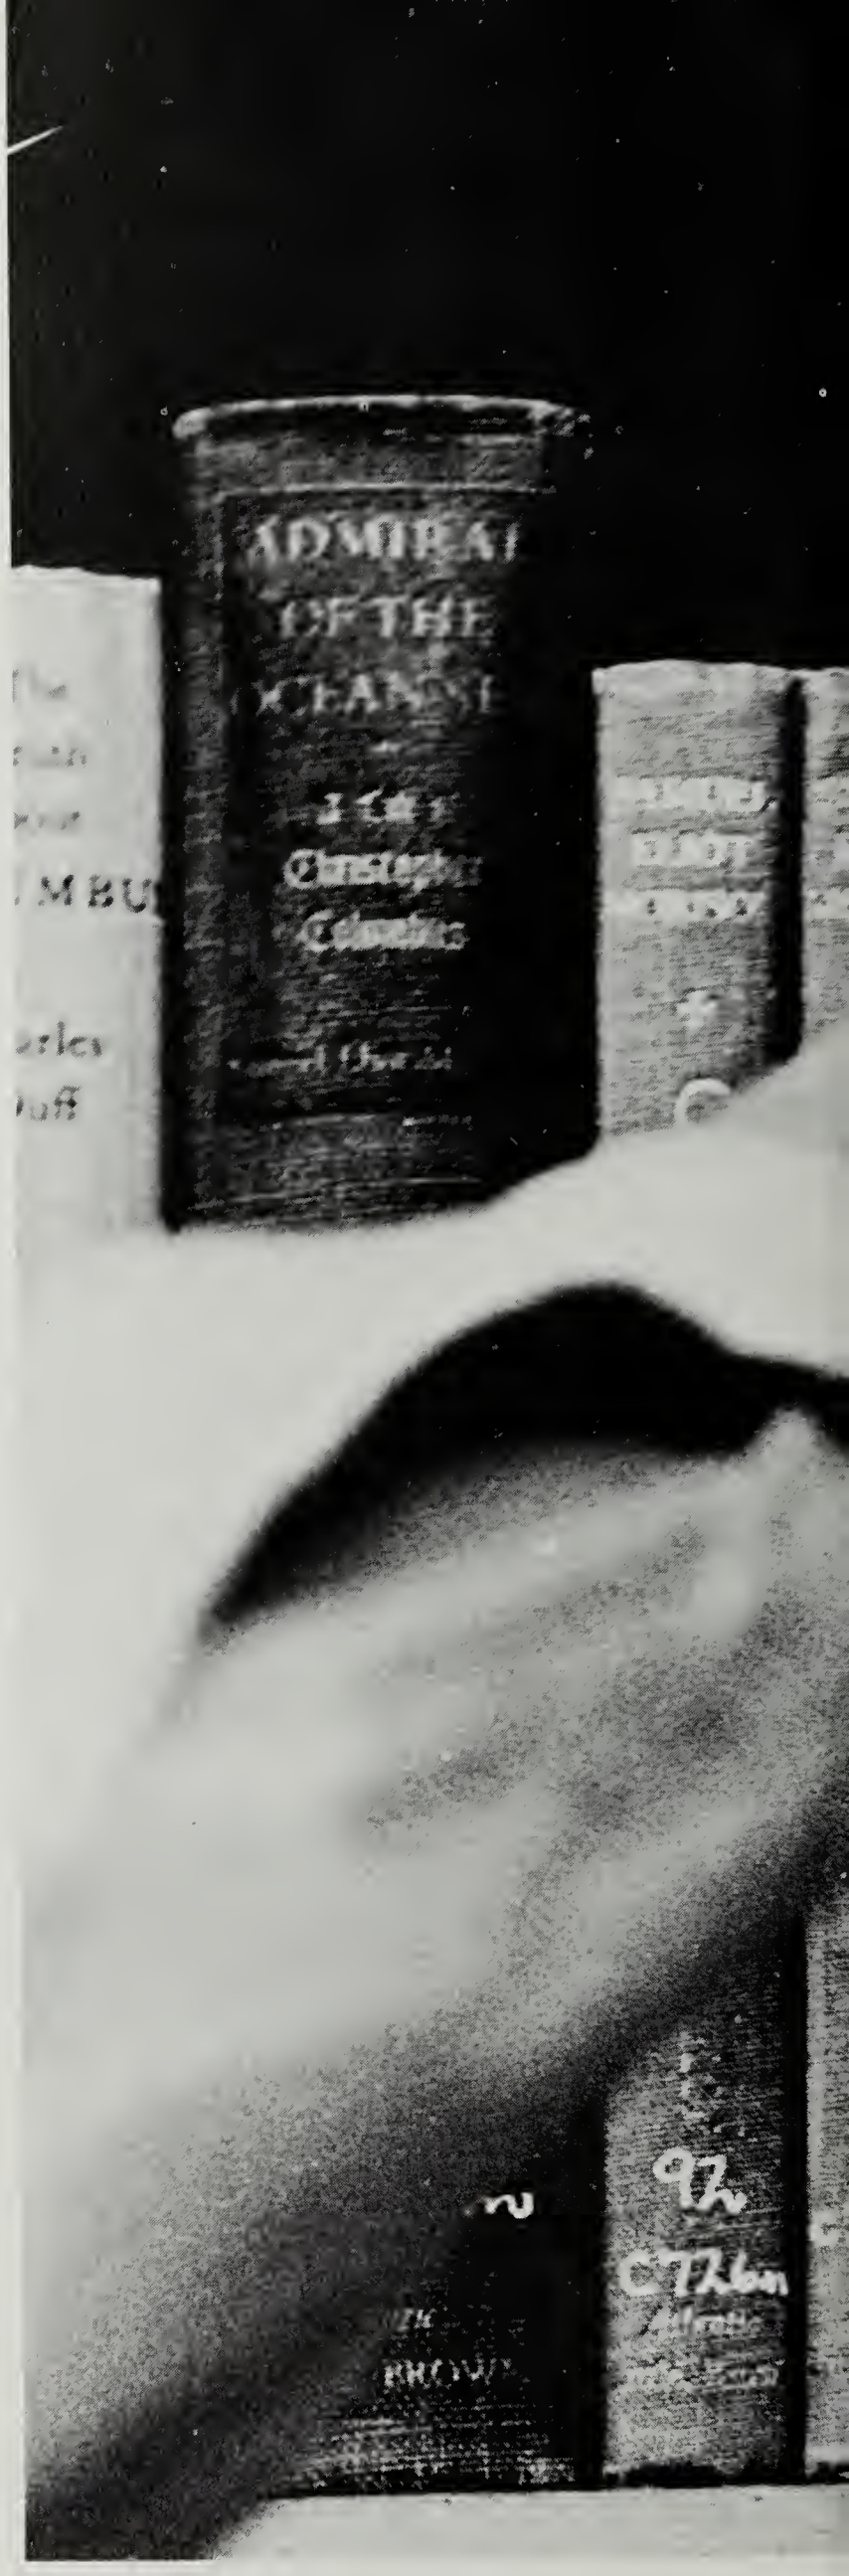

A student paused to review a year of his life, documented in his yearbook which contained sorrow, work, joy, surprise, and excitement.

Mike Moffit did cartwheels, on W.T.W.'s sunny sidewalks, to convey his exhilaration that the end of school was near.

Mr. Ladson took command when Mr. Phipps was promoted

Mr. William P. Ladson, Principal

Mr. W. T. Woodson and Mr. Robert Phipps

"To provide an atmosphere where teachers could teach and students could learn" piloted every decision made by the administration. Mr. Phipps, our principal from the beginning of the school year until the end of November, was promoted to Area Administrator. Mr. Ladson became Woodson's new principal on December first. He was previously the assistant principal for instruction in the area of science and math. Mr. Lina worked with the eleventh and twelfth grades, while Mr. Oliverio worked with the ninth and tenth grades to limit the problems evolving from attendance and discipline. Mr. Volrath became responsible for all school administration and Mr. Dowling took on the responsibility of an administrative aid, taking charge of Adult Education.

During the summer the department was remodeled to improve efficiency. The main office became a reception room for visitors, while those in the new Student Administration Office greeted tardy students with a cheery smile. The administrative department was responsible for the wide choice of subjects which appeared in our curriculum.

Woodson library brought up to 20,000 volume mark

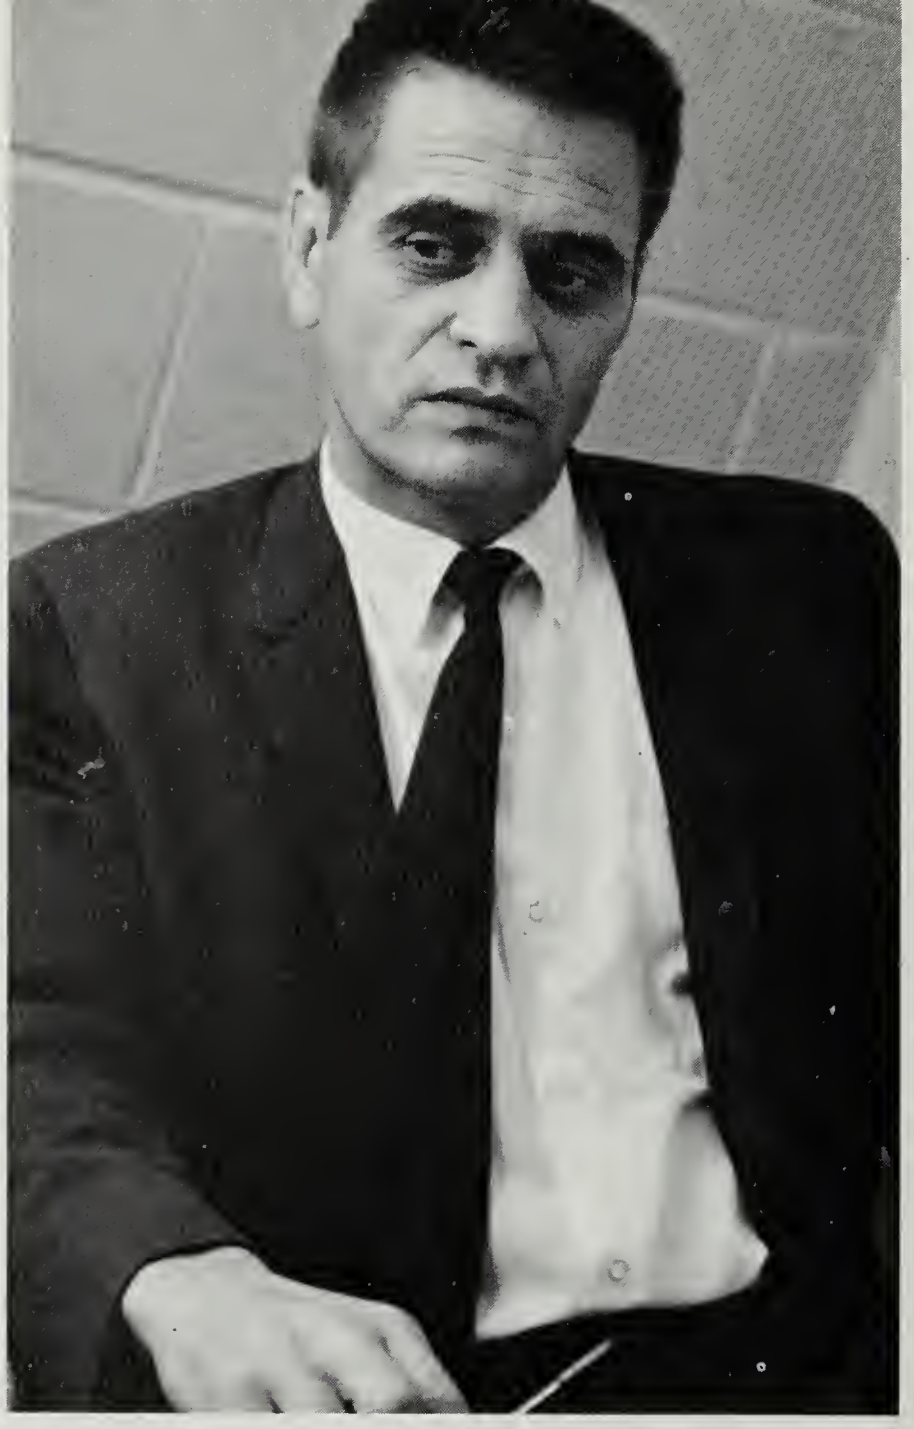

"How much will this overdue book cost me? Ninety cents?! Well, there goes my lunch for the next two days."

"I can't find the 800's, and I just HAVE to get the book, Guide to Great Plays."

"Well, I don't understand how one little chair can make so much difference. Why can't we just move it over there?"

Despite these minor tragedies, students continued to use the library facilities. The library was expanded and rearranged over summer vacation to provide a wider selection of books for student use. Many readers were attracted by the addition of a magazine reading area. Enough books were added to the already-large collection to bring the library up to the 20,000 volume mark.

Assistance, guidance, molding character through understanding . . . These words characterized the guidance department. The entire office was remodeled and expanded during summer vacation to increase efficiency and to provide a more at-home atmosphere. The large waiting room was stocked with pamphlets and catalogs from colleges and universities, affording students an opportunity to ponder over the important decisions that inevitably influence every college-bound student. The vast improvement of the entire guidance department was one that was readily apparent.

Caught in a rare moment, Charlie Coates dons the garb of a Symphonic Choir member and solemnly prepares for his final concert at Woodson.

Language, art, and music provided welcome change in schedule

Art, Music, Language Depts.

"In a world where all is water, who can tell when goldfish weep?" was the first modern art attraction displayed in the art wing. The sole purpose of the art classes was not to create strange abstractions. Instead, the course was designed to instill in students the various techniques of expressing an emotion. Students learned to organize their compositions in a way that the relationship of the objects drawn was natural and yet forceful and coherent. They learned to combine colors and use various mediums including pen, pencil, water-color and oil. Most important, the art students trained their drawing hand to respond to their command.

Mr. Grant and Mr. Lawrence received prodigious praises for the outstanding performances of the Symphonic Band and Choir. The chorus's first presentation was on November 22. With the Thanksgiving Choral Assembly, the audience was taken through the holidays of an entire year with harmonious songs and effective narration.

The Intermediate and Symphonic Choir's Christmas Concerts marked the end of 1967 and the beginning of a New Year.

Extravaganza and the Easter and Spring Concerts were feature attractions of 1968. All in all, displayed throughout the entire year was the distinguished talent of the many musically inclined students of W. T. Woodson.

The Foreign Language Department added Portuguese to its curriculum as an experimental program. Students enrolled in this non-credit course made tape recordings for the Voice of America and wrote their own textbook. Quoting Mr. Wachholz, "A text to introduce contemporary spoken Brazilian Portuguese and the way of life of its users was prepared as the experimental course developed. The demonstrated interests of the students determined the content, while the teaching experience gained determined the learning technique employed.

I maintained constant consultation with the Brazilian colony in Washington to insure 'up-to-dateness', accuracy and good taste of the content of material."

Believe it or not, this potential vase was once a slimy lump of clay; under skillful hands of an Art IV student, it will become an object of beauty.

Mrs. Harris plays the guitar as her Spanish students, Barbara Stoneman, Susan Arnberger, Gary Tucci and Ann Taylor sing native Spanish folk songs. Learning songs and customs of different lands add interest to foreign language classes.

English and social studies conquered the world's past

Mrs. Bedinger relaxes as she directs one of her drama students through "The Glass Menagerie."

Romeo, portrayed by Bill White, steps out to prevent a duel between members of the Capulet and the Montahue families, during the Drama I production of "Romeo and Juliet." Steve Henderson, Bill White, Howie Whittemore, Brian Carter, and Jan Karracher.

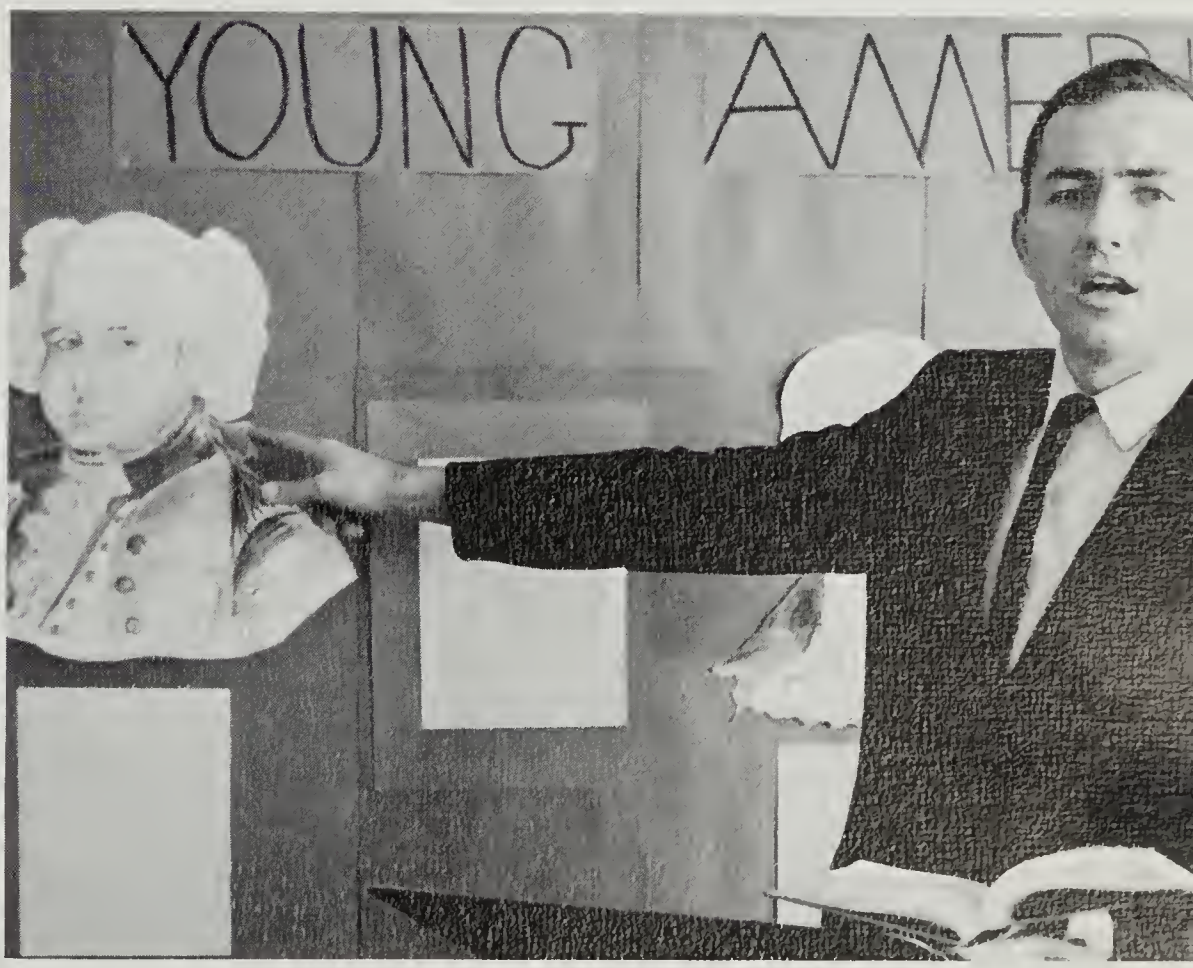

What do the teachers talk about while their students are doing research work in the library? Mr. Bielich and Mr. Harrington discuss the situation in Viet Nam, while Mr. Gaiser and Mrs. Cullinan trade the latest Bill Cosby jokes.

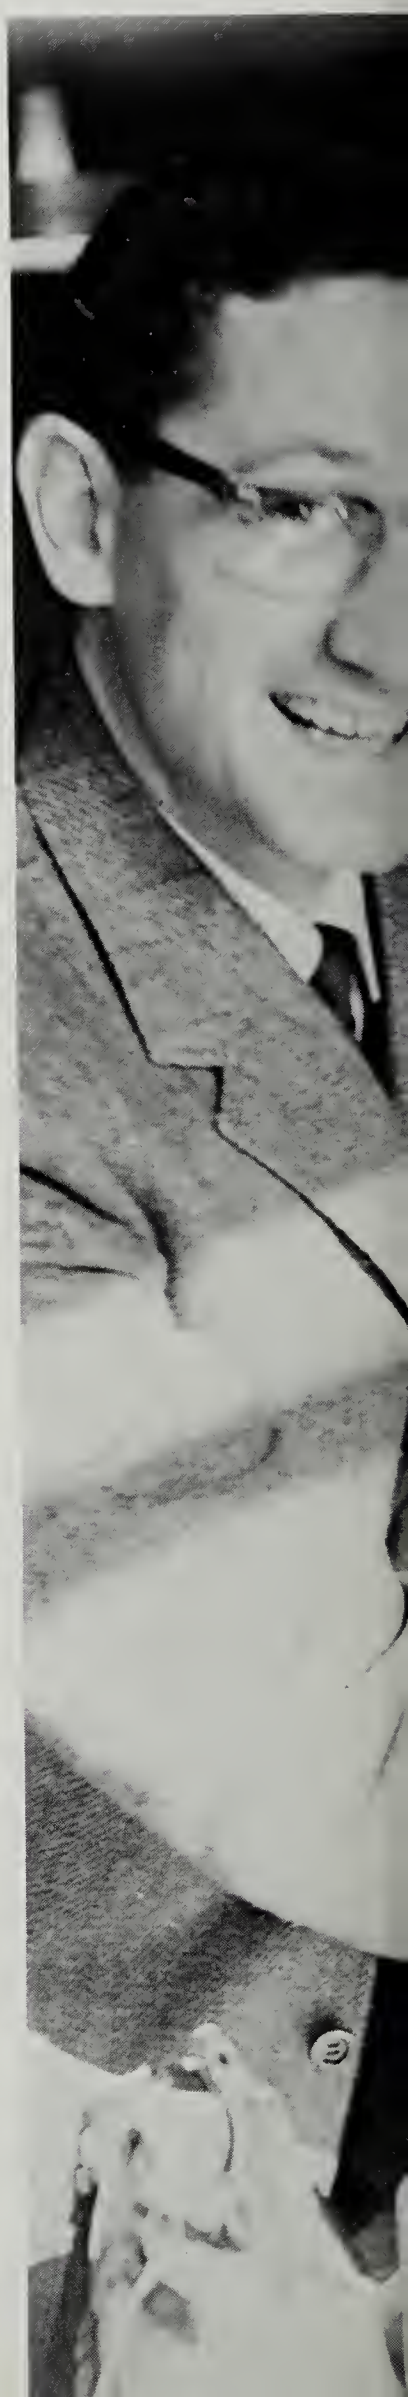

"Man's Search for Utopia," and "Man's View on Death," have been soul searching questions throughout history. This year, students have had the opportunity to seek answers and solutions to these age old queries through a new course offered to those who wish to study specialized areas of English.

Man is not perfect and yet each generation learns from the past generation. It is in this realm that Social Study students endeavored to better understand mankind and the ultimate civilization that man creates.

"What do you mean you don't know who he is?!?" A frustrated Mr. Eakin contemplates a retreat to the teachers' lounge.

Charles Irwin looks over a bulletin board before his math class as Jim Nystrom and Alan Heiser study before a test. Several rooms were decorated with similar art work consisting of conic sections and other mathematical designs.

"Zap!" The mighty Vandegraph Generator electrically charged another unfortunate student as he darted toward the open door.

"Zip!" The razor-sharp scapel slit through the epidermis of another slimy, green frog in the midst of a crowd of blood-thirsty biology students.

Learning in the Science Department was spiced with labs where students reasoned out logical explanations behind facts and theories.

Mathematics and science courses fired new interest in research

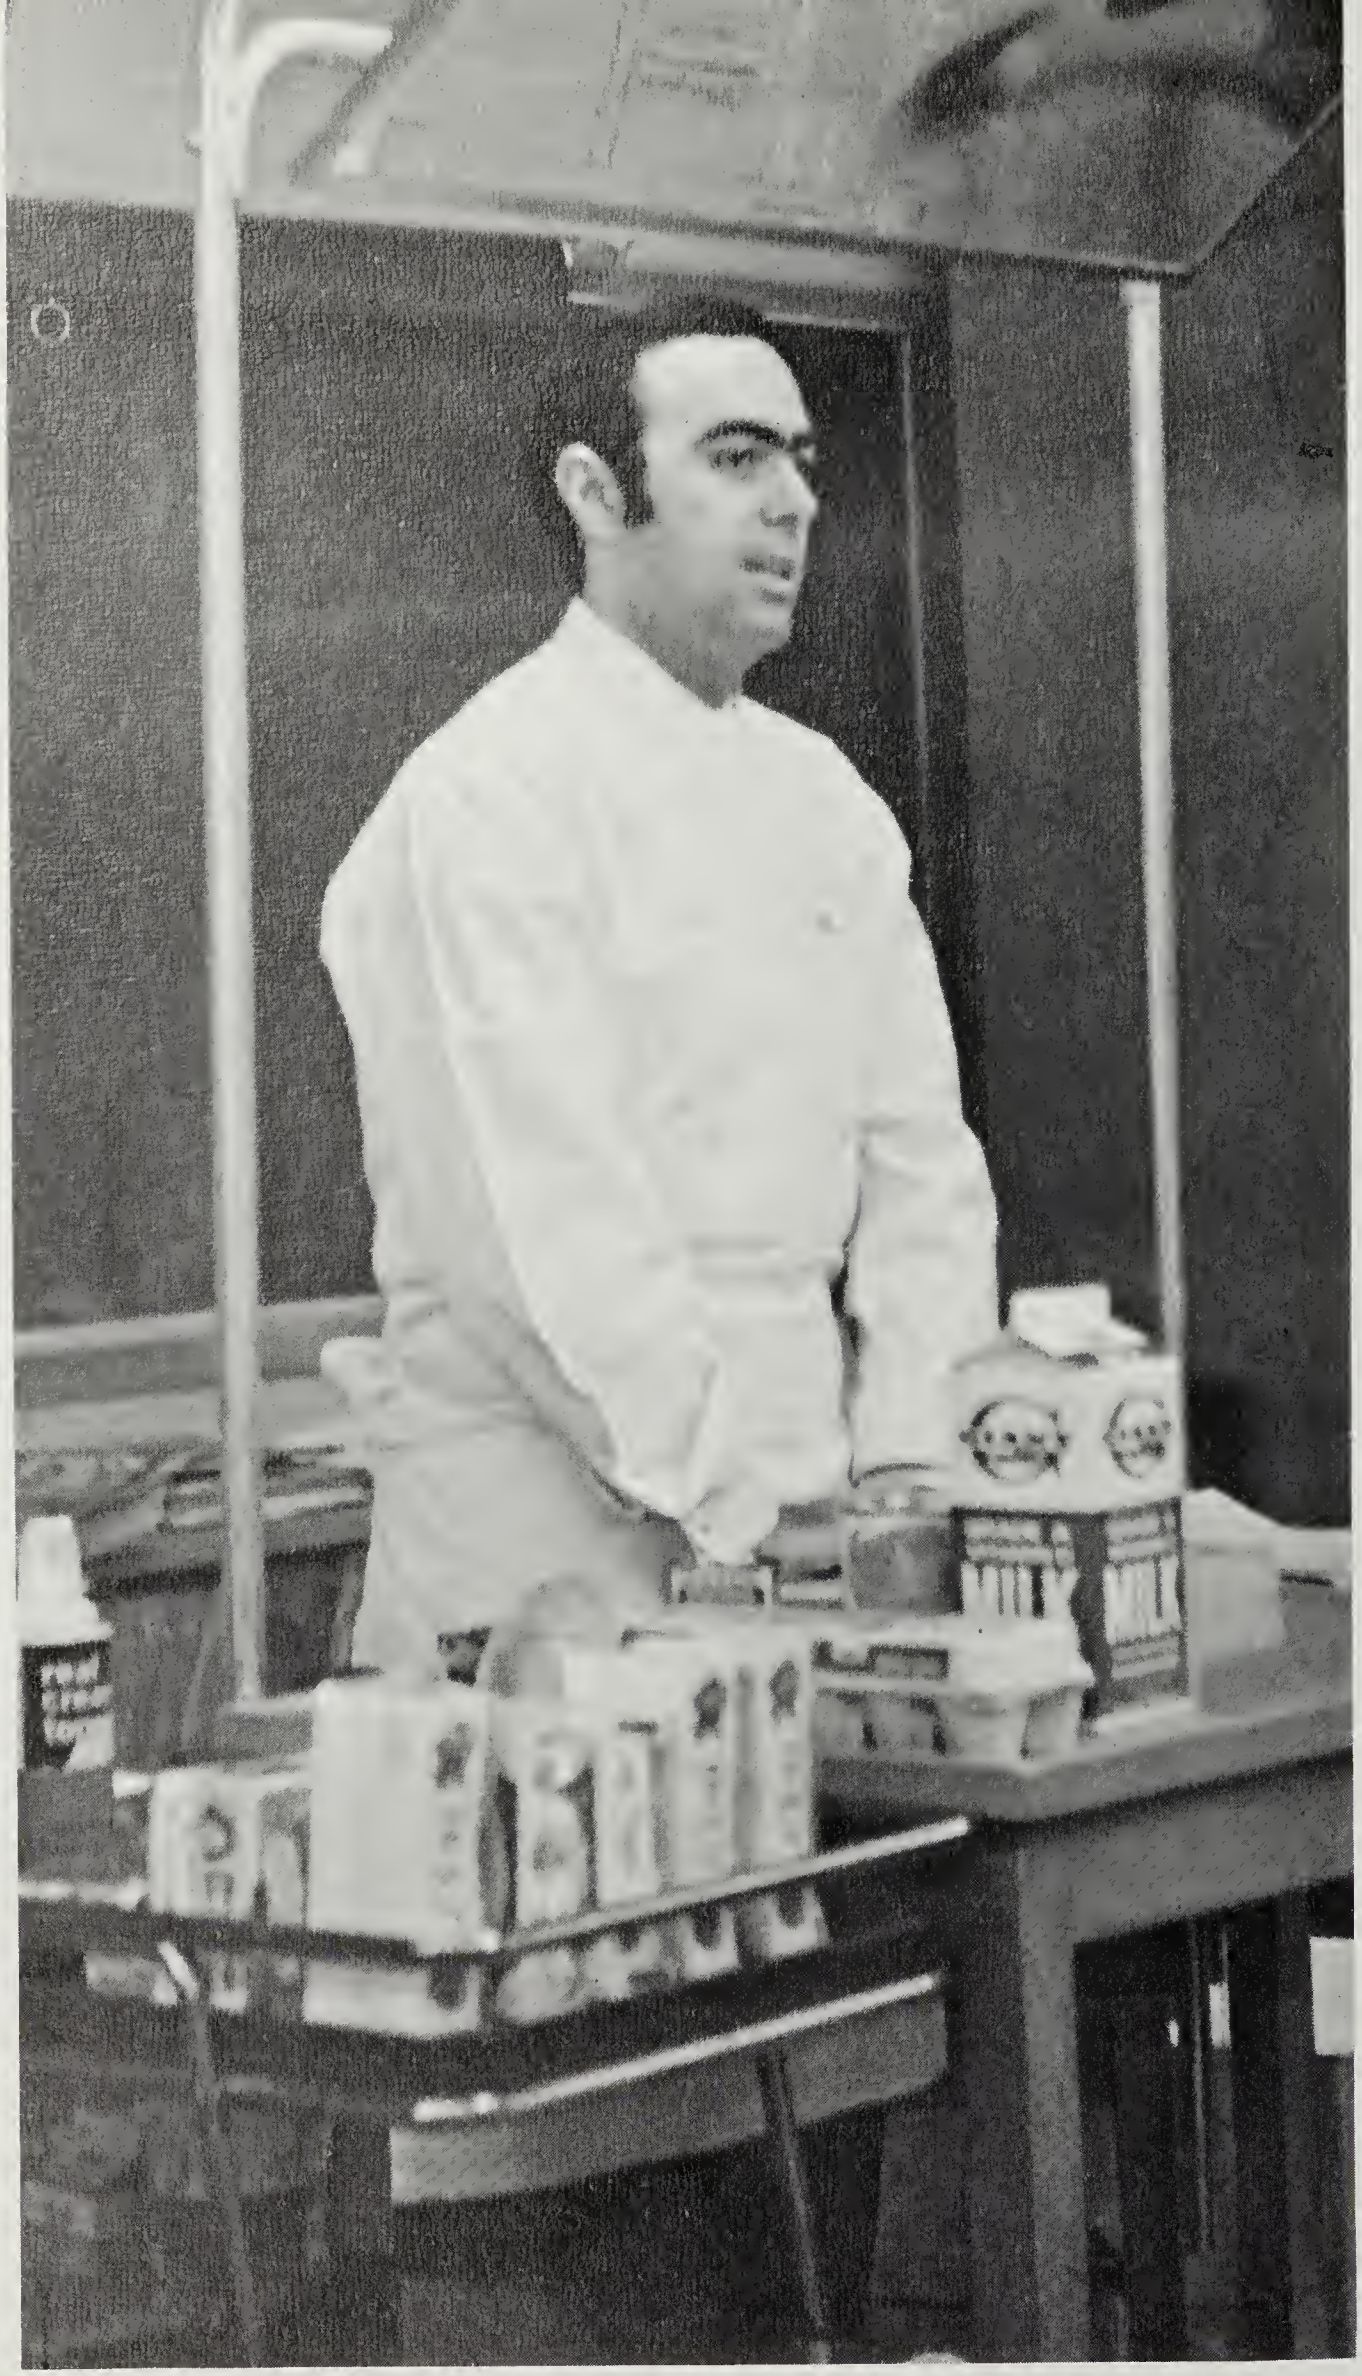

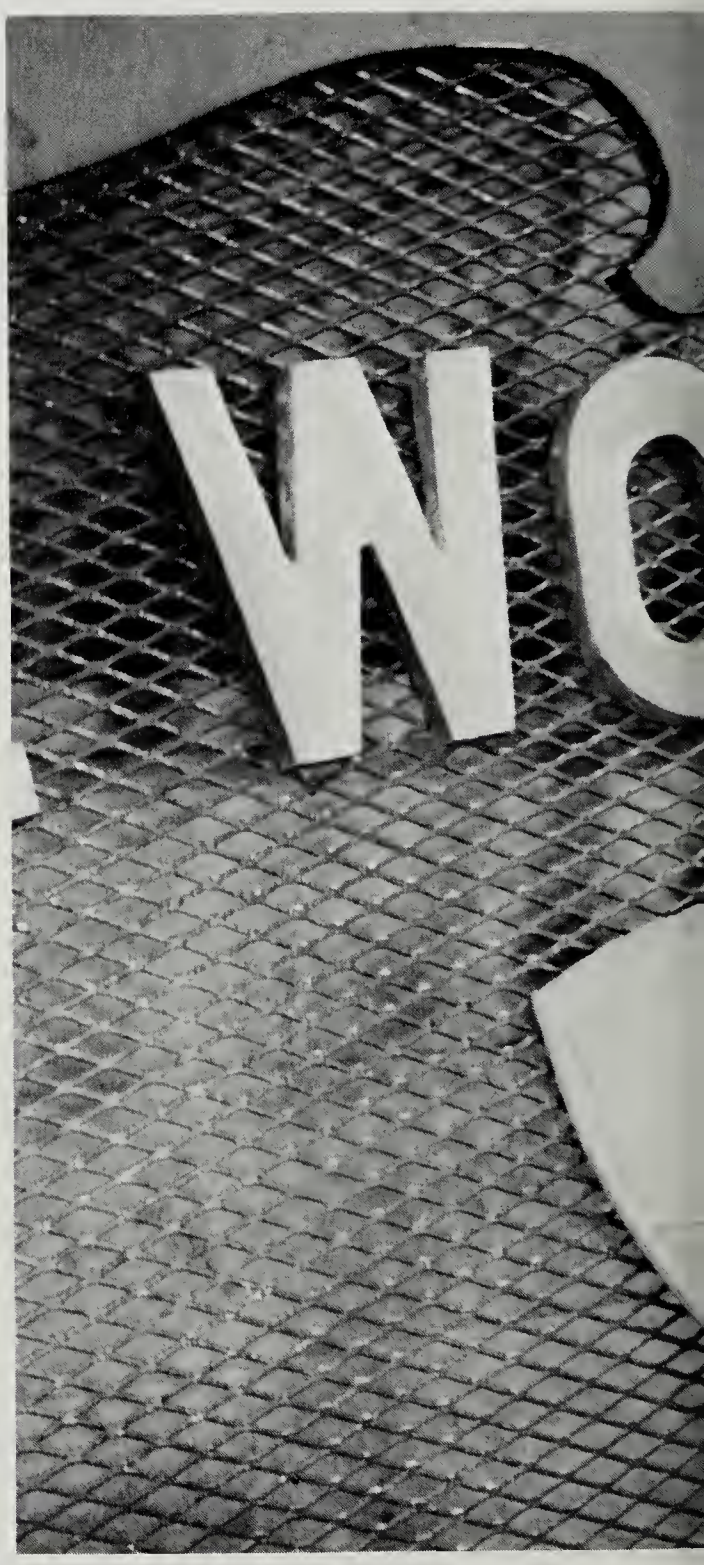

Jeanne Feagan finds being a lab assistant for Mrs. Opp is a hair-raising experience.

Mr. Wells laughs gaily for the camera as Dottie Boulter slyly pours HCl on his finger.

Alber', a visiting chef sponsored by Giant Food Stores, prepares to demonstrate some of his own recipes to the home ec classes.

Special skills included homemaking arts and industrial crafts

Mr. Robert Kennedy, an industrial arts teacher, adds the finishing touches to the new sign, which was a gift to Woodson by the Key Club.

"That's the fourth time this year I've sewn my finger to the stupid sewing machine." This could be heard as the home economics courses attempted to make promising housewives out of Woodson students. Besides sewing, the girls learned the fundamentals of cooking, and they practiced good grooming habits and personality development.

Other courses included in the Special Skills Department ranged from auto mechanics to carpentry, refrigerator repair to architectural drawing.

The greasy fingers and dirty jeans were accepted as an inevitable part of the course, for those who dared to poke around in the engines of cars. Students taking refrigerator and air conditioning repair toiled three hours a day, learning about the temperamental vital organs of the electrical appliances. Electronics students pondered thoughtfully over Ohm's Theory and other basic laws of electricity, conducting frequent, life-endangering experiments.

All day long, the power saws and drills of the shop buzzed, giving the impression of a roomful of giant bumble bees to anyone who happened to be strolling down the Industrial Arts wing. Architectural and mechanical drawing students drafted pictures of their dream houses and of modern appliances. Future engineers studied the basic concepts of construction and engineering, while carpentry students plunged their knuckles into woodwork.

Through all of these special skills courses, Woodson students obtained experience in dealing with the actual emergencies and repairs involved in their particular fields of interest.

An auto mechanics student searches frantically through the carburetor for his right hand.

Business and P.E. students co-ordinated mind and body

John Green assists a fellow student, as his headstand is not at its best.

Mr. Shepherd takes a minute out during a Varsity football game to look over the game statistics.

After an exasperating day at the electric typewriter, Peggy Powell has Excedrin Headache #27.

Forgetting her shorthand for a brief moment, Valerie Grabsch glances aside at the bell schedule for the early closing today.

"All right, quiet down class! We're going to have a ten minute timed drill on section eight. Ready, begin . . . . . BUZZ, times up." "You've got to be kidding. If that was ten minutes, I'll eat my hat . . . You say it really was ten minutes . . . O.K., O.K., I'll eat my hat!"

Many students were astonished at how ten minutes vanished during a timed drill in shorthand, notehand or typing. But I.B.M. electric typewriters and the new "Shorthand Labs" helped equalize the minutes spent and the material completed.

Students who desired, prepared for future employment by studying Data Processing, Bookkeeping, General Business or Business Law.

Clad in blue gymsuits and P.F. Fliers, P.E. students sprang into action, ready to take on football, basketball, and other vigorous activities.

No longer did students have to clambor, frantically, over a bundle of sweaty gymsuits, in order to find that one tagged their own, because, at last, each student had an individual locker.

Classes may not have been comfortable, but at least they weren't overcrowded. The once impossible task of remembering the names and faces of classmates became a thing of the past.

The gym department updated its program to meet both the present and future needs of all students by offering activities which would be of value to them now as well as in later years. Among the courses offered were leisure-time sports, including tennis and golf.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Student Government at Woodson had another successful year in 1967-68. Under the leadership of Bruce Graham, president; Whit Hollis, vice president; Kendra VanderMeulen, secretary; and Greg Pozinsky, treasurer; many new projects and programs were initiated. Two new executive committees, Spirit and Safety, were added to the cabinet.

The Christmas Drive was the highlight of Student Government's year. Wide newspaper coverage resulted from the rebuilding of a Woodson cafeteria worker's house that had been destroyed by fire. Woodson students collected money for construction materials and gifts, and rebuilt her home.

Other successful highlights of the year were the Magazine Drive, Leadership Training Conference, and the hosting at Woodson of an International Tennis Team for three days.

John Singlaub strikes a gallant pose in the Student Government office. John is currently Student Government Historian.

National Honor Society

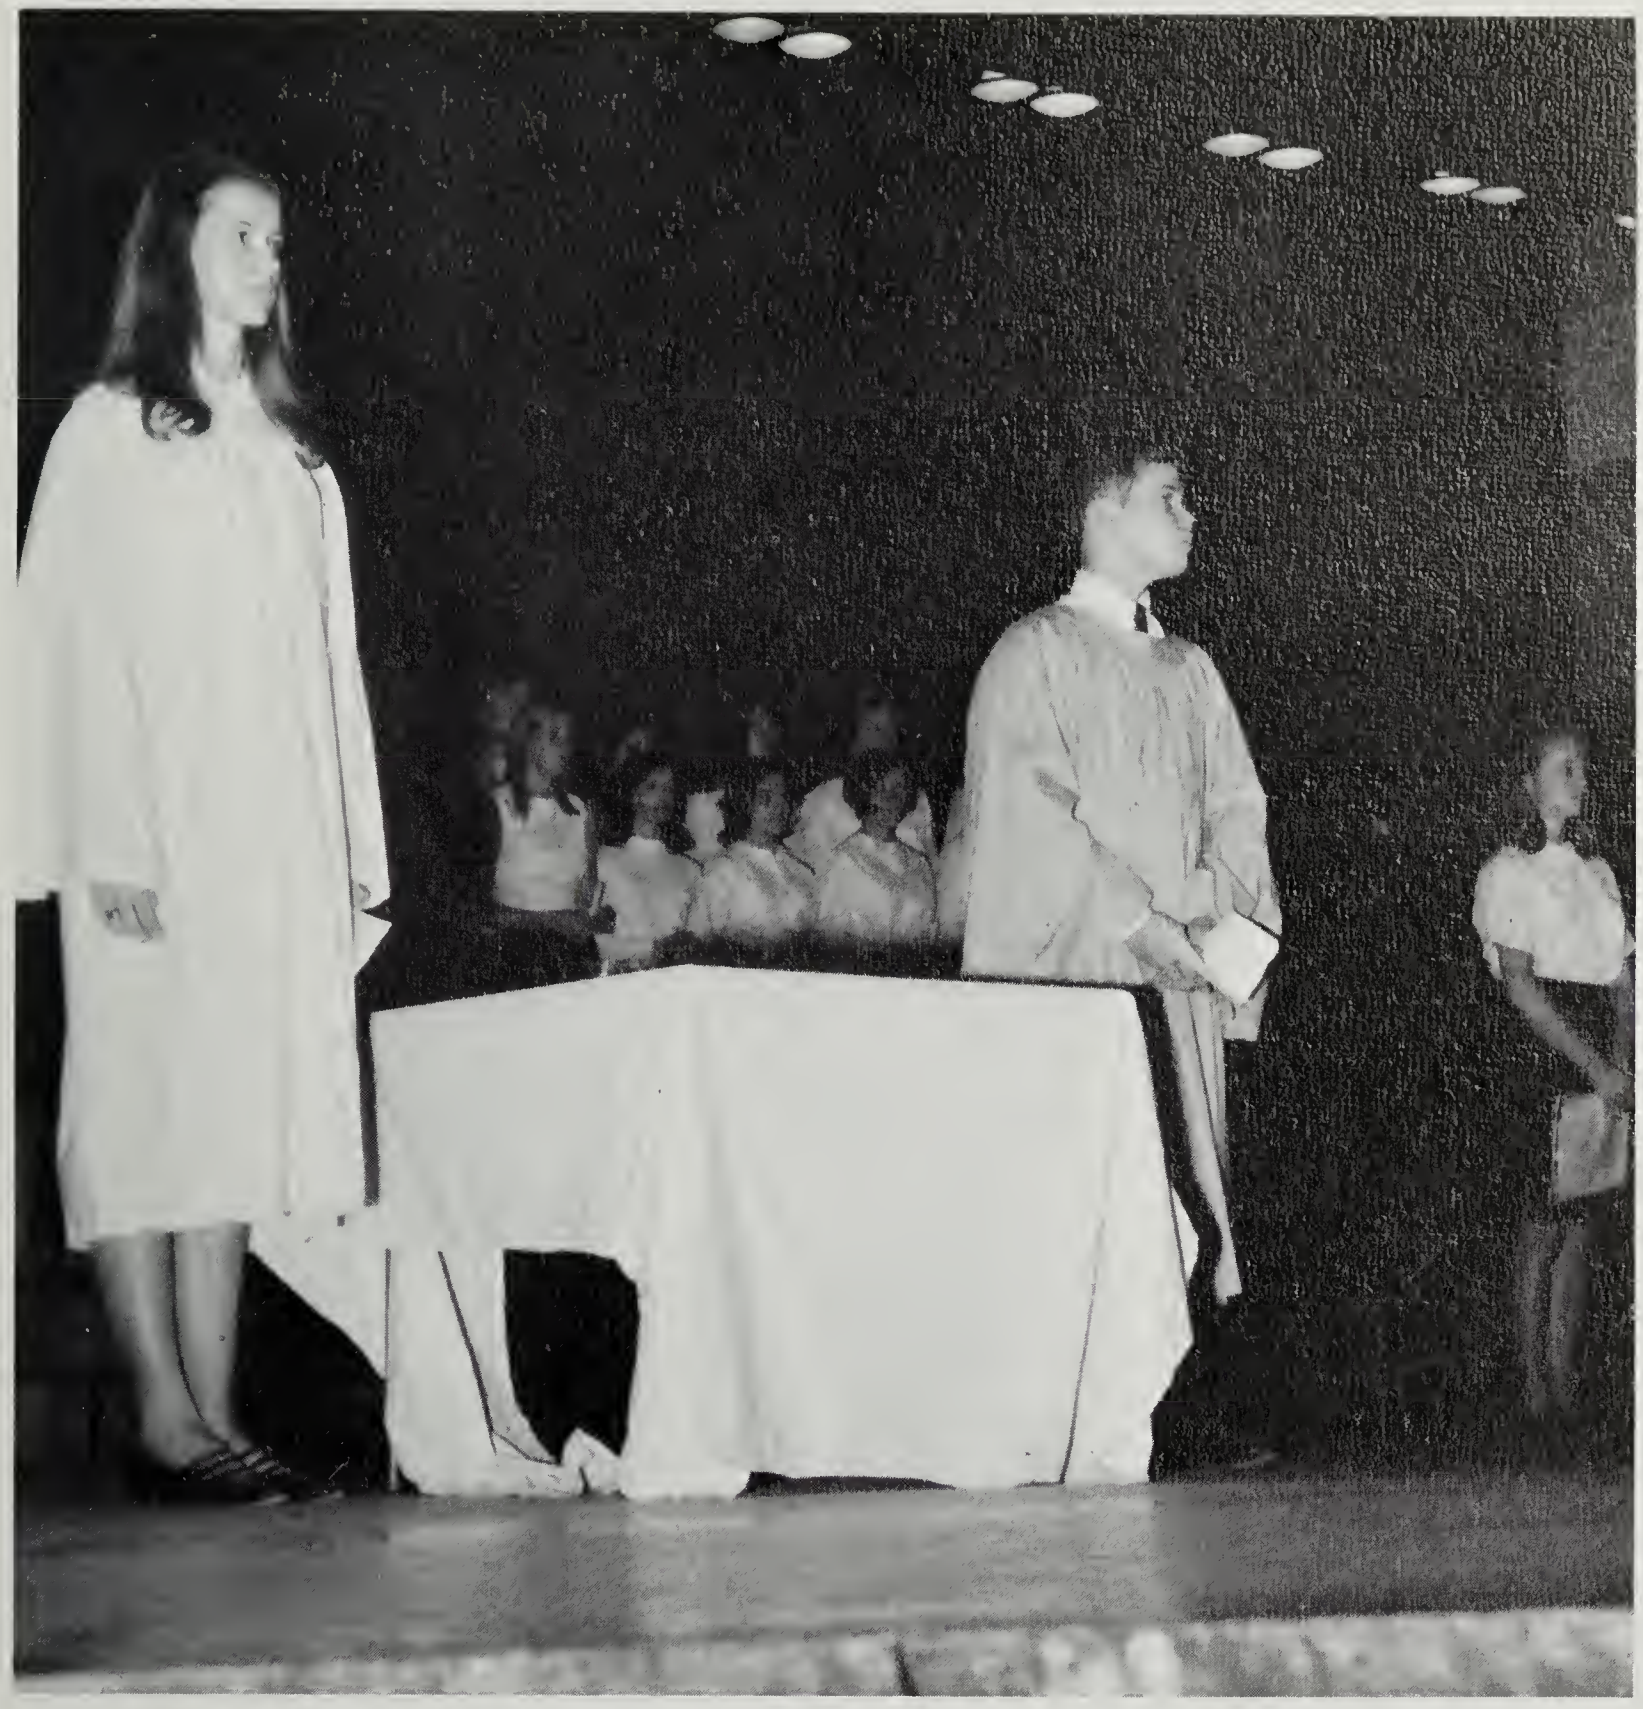

The student body vivaciously entered the auditorium, clamoring for seats and exchanging warm greetings interspersed with frigid insults.

Suddenly, after the lights were turned off, the auditorium was darkened and a faint glow of light radiated in the background. This for certain was not just another assembly.

Straining their necks, students turned to catch a glimpse of what they sensed behind them. At first, the students became aware of a maze of tiny flickering lights, steadily drawing closer and growing larger. Now, being able to get a closer look, the students were able to focus their eyes on a most inspiring sight. Brightly glowing candles were held firmly in the hands of scholarly students who slowly walked down the darkened corridors of the auditorium.

Lynn Darling and Skip Norfolk reflect the somber mood of Honor Society inductions. They explained the purpose and function of NHS to the student body.

The shimmering lights reflected on their dedicated faces and the ever growing pride within their hearts caused the honor students' eyes to sparkle as never before.

These students were about to receive an honor well worth the sacrifices they so willingly made in the past to insure outstanding scholastic achievement. They were about to be inducted into the National Honor Society.

Early in September, the Honor Society's Speaker's Bureau went from homeroom to homeroom acquainting students with the organization that sponsored a tutoring service and through the Fine Arts Committee's interesting assemblies

The Navy Band received a standing ovation at the end of their performance. Everyone agreed that it was "the best in Woodson's history." There was, as the Newspaper Staff cleverly stated "much ado about Catholic U.", as the National Players staged "Much Ado About Nothing" early in October.

Cavalcade

"Hey, Odeo Kaloney, have you seen Biggy Rat? He's got my editorial, and Manfred and I need it desperately for our layout!"

"No. Itchy Brother, I haven't, but maybe Tom Terrific or Super Woman can find him for you!"

What's this, Kiddie Cartoon Carnival? Why, of course not, it's the cleverly comical Cavalcade!

The Cavalcade not only instilled a little humor into their rigorous activities, but they also combined initiative, fortitude, and skill to fabricate an outstanding newspaper.

Each reporter scrambled about frantically, gathering all sorts of "juicy" information, while page editors desperately struggled to fill in that one little hole that kept turning up in the midst of their layouts.

Red-letter achievements and potent editorials were highlighted on the first page, while second and third pages featured controversial topics. Complete and accurate accounts of the results of games were listed in the sports section-fourth page. Among the searching questions raised were: "How should high school be taught?", and "What should be done about the glass spattered parking lot?"

Over 2500 students were kept in the know as the Cavalcade repeatedly turned out an outstanding diary of Woodson's many noteworthy events.

Providing a showcase for the best in Cavalier talent was the avowed goal of the staff of the Page, Woodson's outstanding literary-art magazine. Encouraging hesitating young writers, poets and artists to submit their work for evaluation turned out to be the staff's first and foremost job, as they tried to point out to the student body that it was up to them to make the Page a success.

Within its pages, the magazine represented a variety of artistic worlds, ranging from the literary world of poetry, short stories, essays, and features, to the fields of sculpture, photography, painting, and drawing. Quality was the determining factor in selection, as the Page mirrored a true reflection of the ideas, attitudes, and outlooks of its readers.

CAVALIER

Over-exposed photographs, discarded papers and faculty layouts were scattered among mammouth masses of top quality work.

The '68 Cavalier Staff was selected in March '67 and immediately got underway as they attended a Yearbook Workshop at the University of Virginia. Early on the morning of October 13th, the staff boarded a bus, their destination New York City. At their own expense, the students attended a Yearbook Seminar at Columbia University to further their training.

Each day, come sixth period, the jovial staff congregated in room 116 to discuss future deadlines and plan devious methods of escaping last minute rushes. Despite the many pre-arranged plots, the staff never managed to allot quite enough time for all that needed to be accomplished; therefore "deadline" became a dirty word in the vocabulary of the staff, as it meant scrambling for last minute information, reprinting faculty photos and changing numerous layouts.

Frantically working up to the last fraction of a second, a year's effort was submitted, and the staff took a deep sigh of relief-only to start the following day on the task of selecting and training the coming year's staff.

Drama Club

The midnight oil burned in the auditorium as Drama Club members perfected their art. Six weeks before a performance the production swung into action. Costumes were researched and designed, sets were devised, and scripts were studied.

The opening night of the club's first presentation, "Take Her, She's Mine," was attended by only about 100 people due to an untimely eleven-inch snow, but the second night and the later productions more than made up with large audiences.

The most active of Drama Club members were selected for membership to the National Thespian Society. Participants in any aspect of a production were awarded points. The number of points varied on what work was done and how much effort was put forth. When 10 points were accumulated, membership was at hand. With this criteria of participation plus ability, the Thespians were the Honor Society of drama.

Debate Team

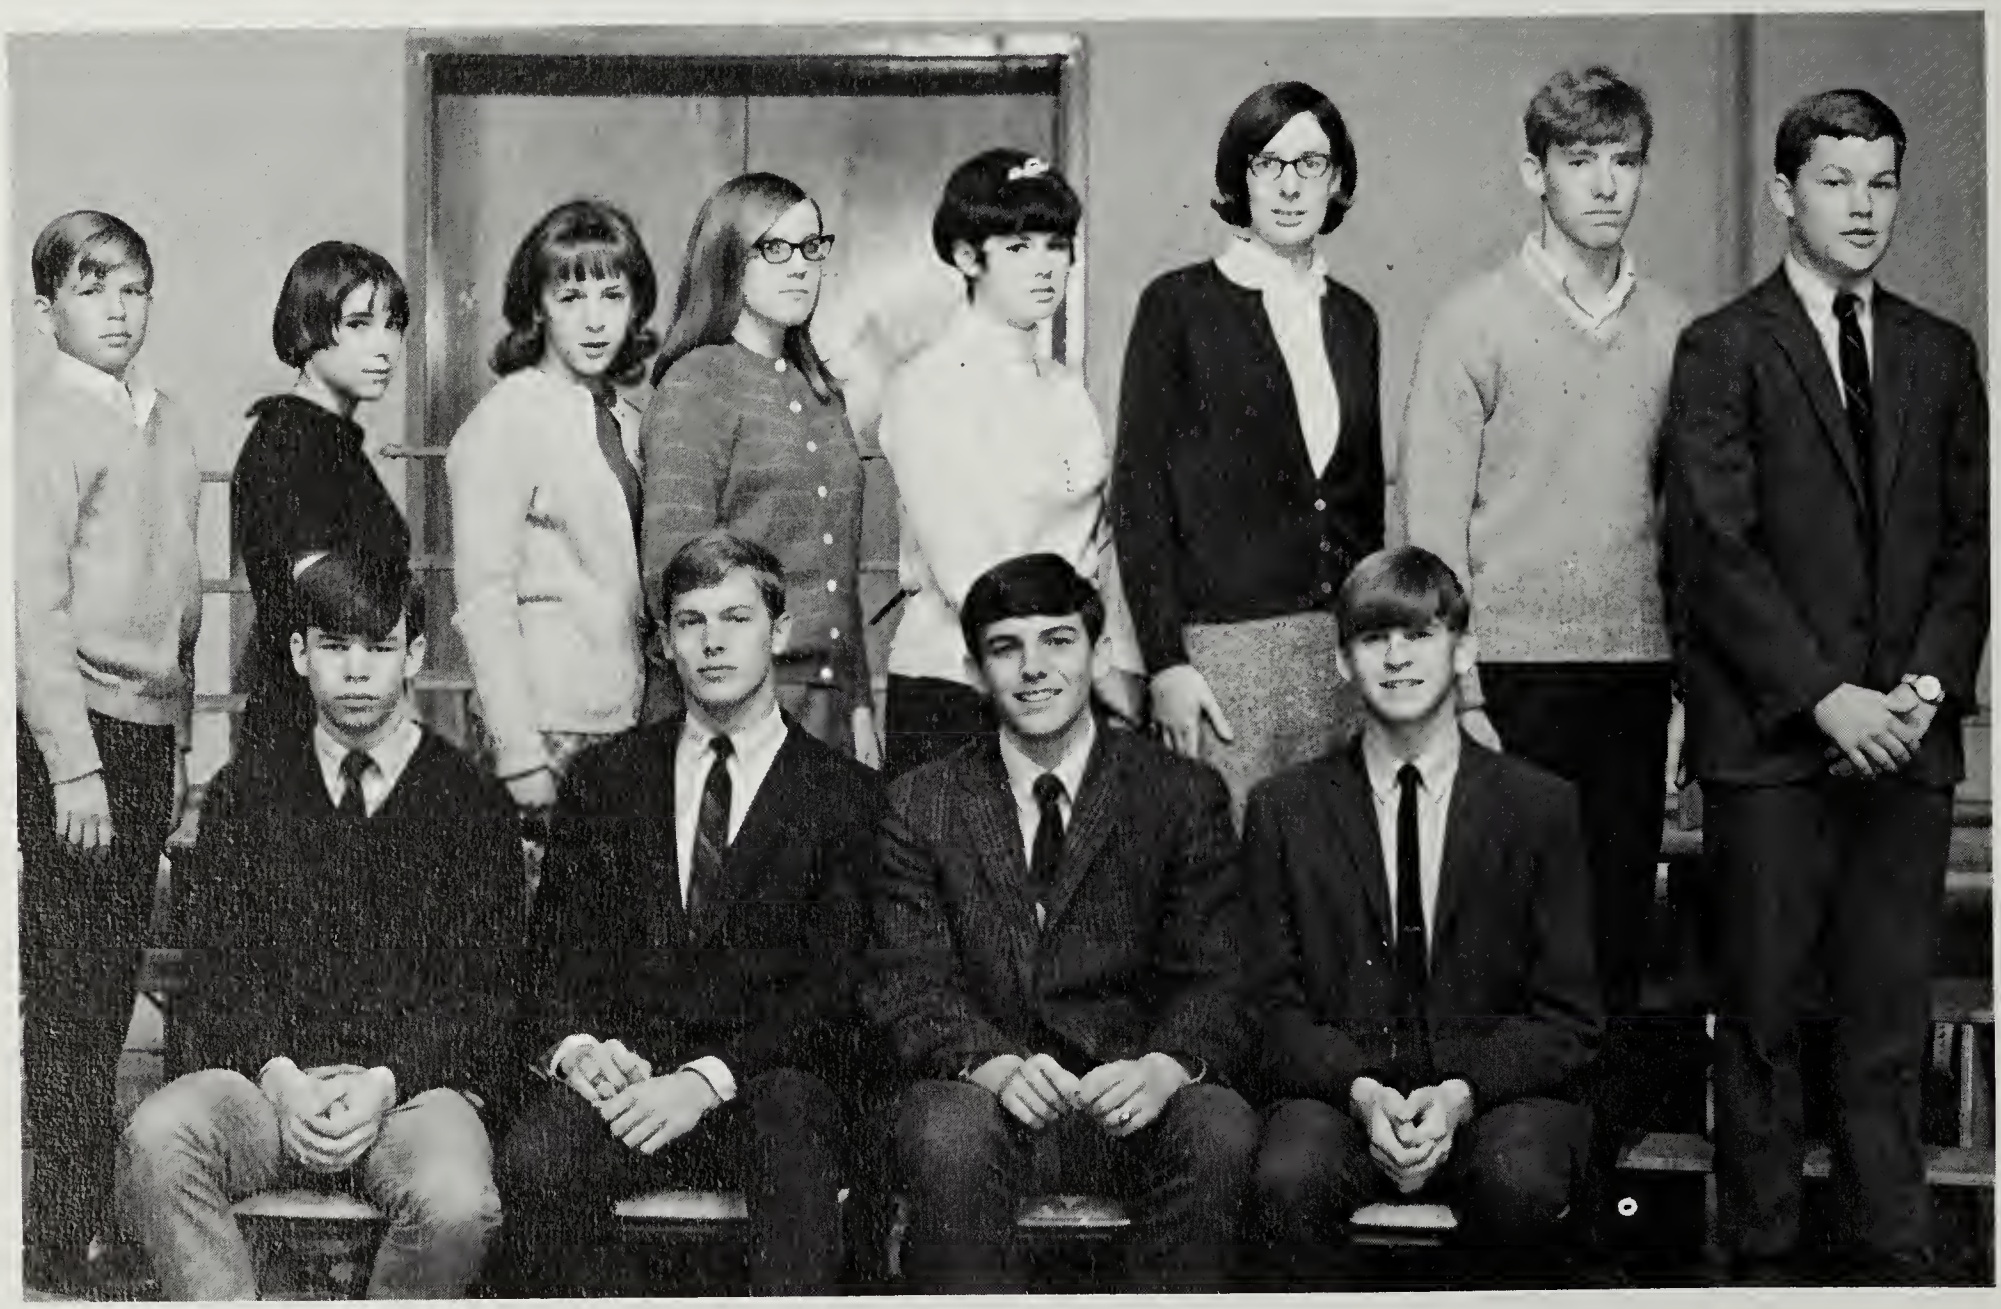

The year began on an optimistic note as the W. T. Woodson Debate Team researched and scrimmaged to prepare for the league opener against Annandale.

"Standardization of criminal investigating procedures" was the topic for debate. The squad was strengthened by varsity returnees Peter McKenna and Rod Burfield.

A new form of distributing material for research was tried this year. A special shelf for debate literature only was set aside in the library. Team members could check out material for one night only and return it the next day. In this way more material was made available to more of the team members.

Dynamic students gave original speeches and the more pensive members injected the full intents of poets to the approval of judges. While prose was interpreted spellers spelled. The ace of the spelling section was Jayne Townsend, a veritable dictionary of English spelling. Mrs. Meadows expressed her high hopes for Jayne in saying that she will take the state championship.

Coach Meadows, in the after-school practices, helped choose works for the individual team members' ability and personality. Then came the countless readings and re-readings in hopes of perfection. The finished result of a year's effort was a feeling for the literary art with a comfort and command of the spoken word.

AFS

The program which evolved from the semi-monthly meetings of the Woodson chapter of the American Field Service attempted to add depth to the student's outlook on the world. Highlights of the year included a trip to New York, a visit to the United Nations, Chinatown, and the Statue of Liberty. Also there was the annual AFS Assembly featuring a mock television program to publicize the history and nature of the organization. In addition the club brought Miriam Nunez from Ecuador to Woodson.

These and other activities of AFS helped to promote the highest ideals of international brotherhood and understanding throughout the world.

"Well, can I help it if my mother never taught me to crack eggs?" Not only did the Future Homemakers of America learn to cook, but they sponsored an Election Day babysitting service and the Annual Red Cross Drive. The Christmas Tea, the Faculty Tea, and the FHA Banquet proved exciting for the tireless girls as they went from one project to another.

The Breakfast Club, sponsored by the FHA, served orange juice, doughnuts, and milk in Cafeteria B every morning for those poor, starving souls who had skipped breakfast.

FTA Club

The third grade class had just begun in the Cantebury Wood's Elementary School when four Woodson FTA students entered the room interrupting the practicing of the multiplication table.

"Who are they?" whispered a girl in the back of the room.

"I know," a small boy answered, "they're the FTA people."

"FTA people? What's that?" she asked.

"They want to be teachers so they get out of school to see how teachers teach."

"Oh, I see," said the girl. "When I get to high school I'm going to be an FTA person so I can get out of school."

"Yeah, but that's not all they do. Sometimes they have teas for their teachers and they sell cookies and cakes."

Another boy added, "That's called a bake sale. My brother is in the FTA and he told me so."

"You mean boys can join?"

"Sure, anyone who's interested about teaching can be a member."

KEYETTES

"Oh, great, my 'secret pal' left a snowball in my locker! If only I knew who she was . . ."

Along with "secret pals," Keyettes had other traditions. The Christmas time candy cane sale left many a student with sticky fingers and gooey faces, and the Daffodil Sale on the first day of spring brightened Woodson's halls and classrooms.

The most important service projects conducted by Keyettes during the school year were Safety Week and Peace Corps Week. Representative Keyettes attended the National Keyette Convention during the spring in Washington, D. C.

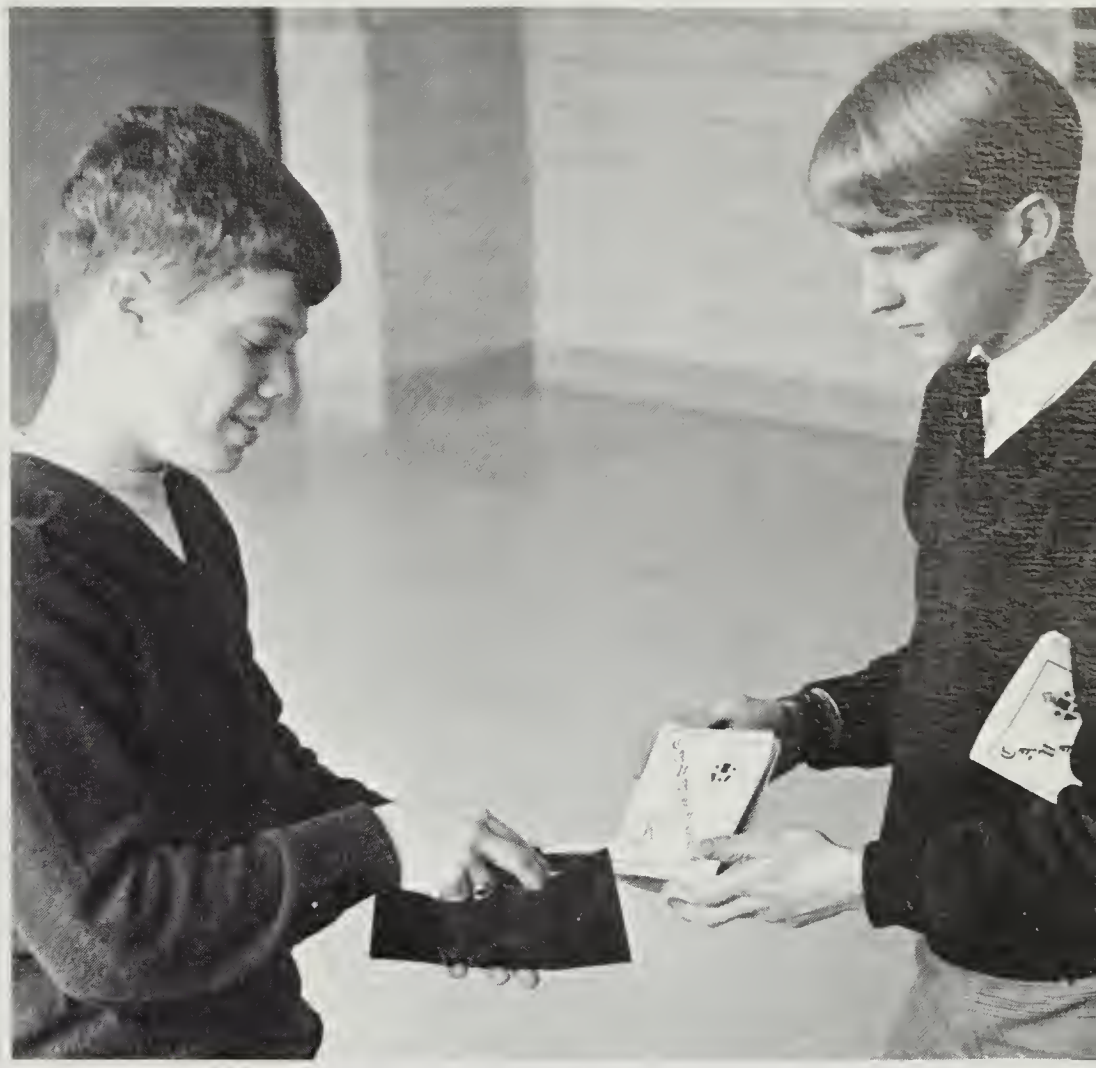

KEY CLUB

The Key Club solved the communications problem with the Student Telephone Directory, Woodson's idea of the Yellow Pages.

The Keyettes, and the Key Club sponsored National Safety Week in the spring. Officer Cox, a member of the Fairfax County Police force, presented movies along with slides depicting teenage accidents where cars were ripped apart and totally mutilated bodies were thrown clear of the wreckage.

With the combination of a pep-rally and sock hop, the Key Club presented the fourth annual Blue and White Night.

Members of the select club are chosen for leadership and service abilities to WTW. They are selected under the scrutinizing auspices of a faculty committee and students.

Cavalier Corps

The "Jack-of-all-trades", Woodson's Cavalier Corps, daringly endeavored to tackle the "dirty work" that other students flatly refused to do and defied uncooperative students who interfered.

Providing exceptional service for W. T. Woodson, the ingenious "handy-men" guarded against unwanted gate crashers, patrolled the jam-packed parking lots, checked in spectators' bulky coats, and in general provided exceptional service.

More than just meeting the demands of a Friday night game, the Cavalier Corps worked with pride to make Woodson a school with pride.

Pep Club

Despite the attempts that were made to change Cavalier Charlie's image from a ludicrous knight to a chivalrous Chevalier, students persisted to bellow, "Hey, there goes good ol' lubberly Cavalier Charlie!" as Carl Gallegos displayed his regal jaunt before a crowd of thousands.

The Pep Club boosted the teams from behind the scenes and designed colorful, colossal posters previewing games.

Baton Corps

"Turn off the lights!" was the cry that filled the stadium, as Woodson students anticipated the attractive, colorful Cavalettes' fire routine at the fifth annual Homecoming rally. Throughout the year, Woodson's Cavalette Baton Corps demonstrated exceptional skill and poise in executing intricate routines. These sixteen talented girls bolstered school spirit at the Friday morning "sunrise services" at pep rallies, football and basketball games, and at Extravaganza.

Pretty Carole Smith is illuminated by one of the lights at the football stadium while performing during a half-time show. Half-time routines are one of the Baton Corps' specialties.

Here they are! Those clowns of the Symphonic Band, the W.T. Woodson Pep Band. The group bolstered school spirit through their artistic performances at pep rallies.

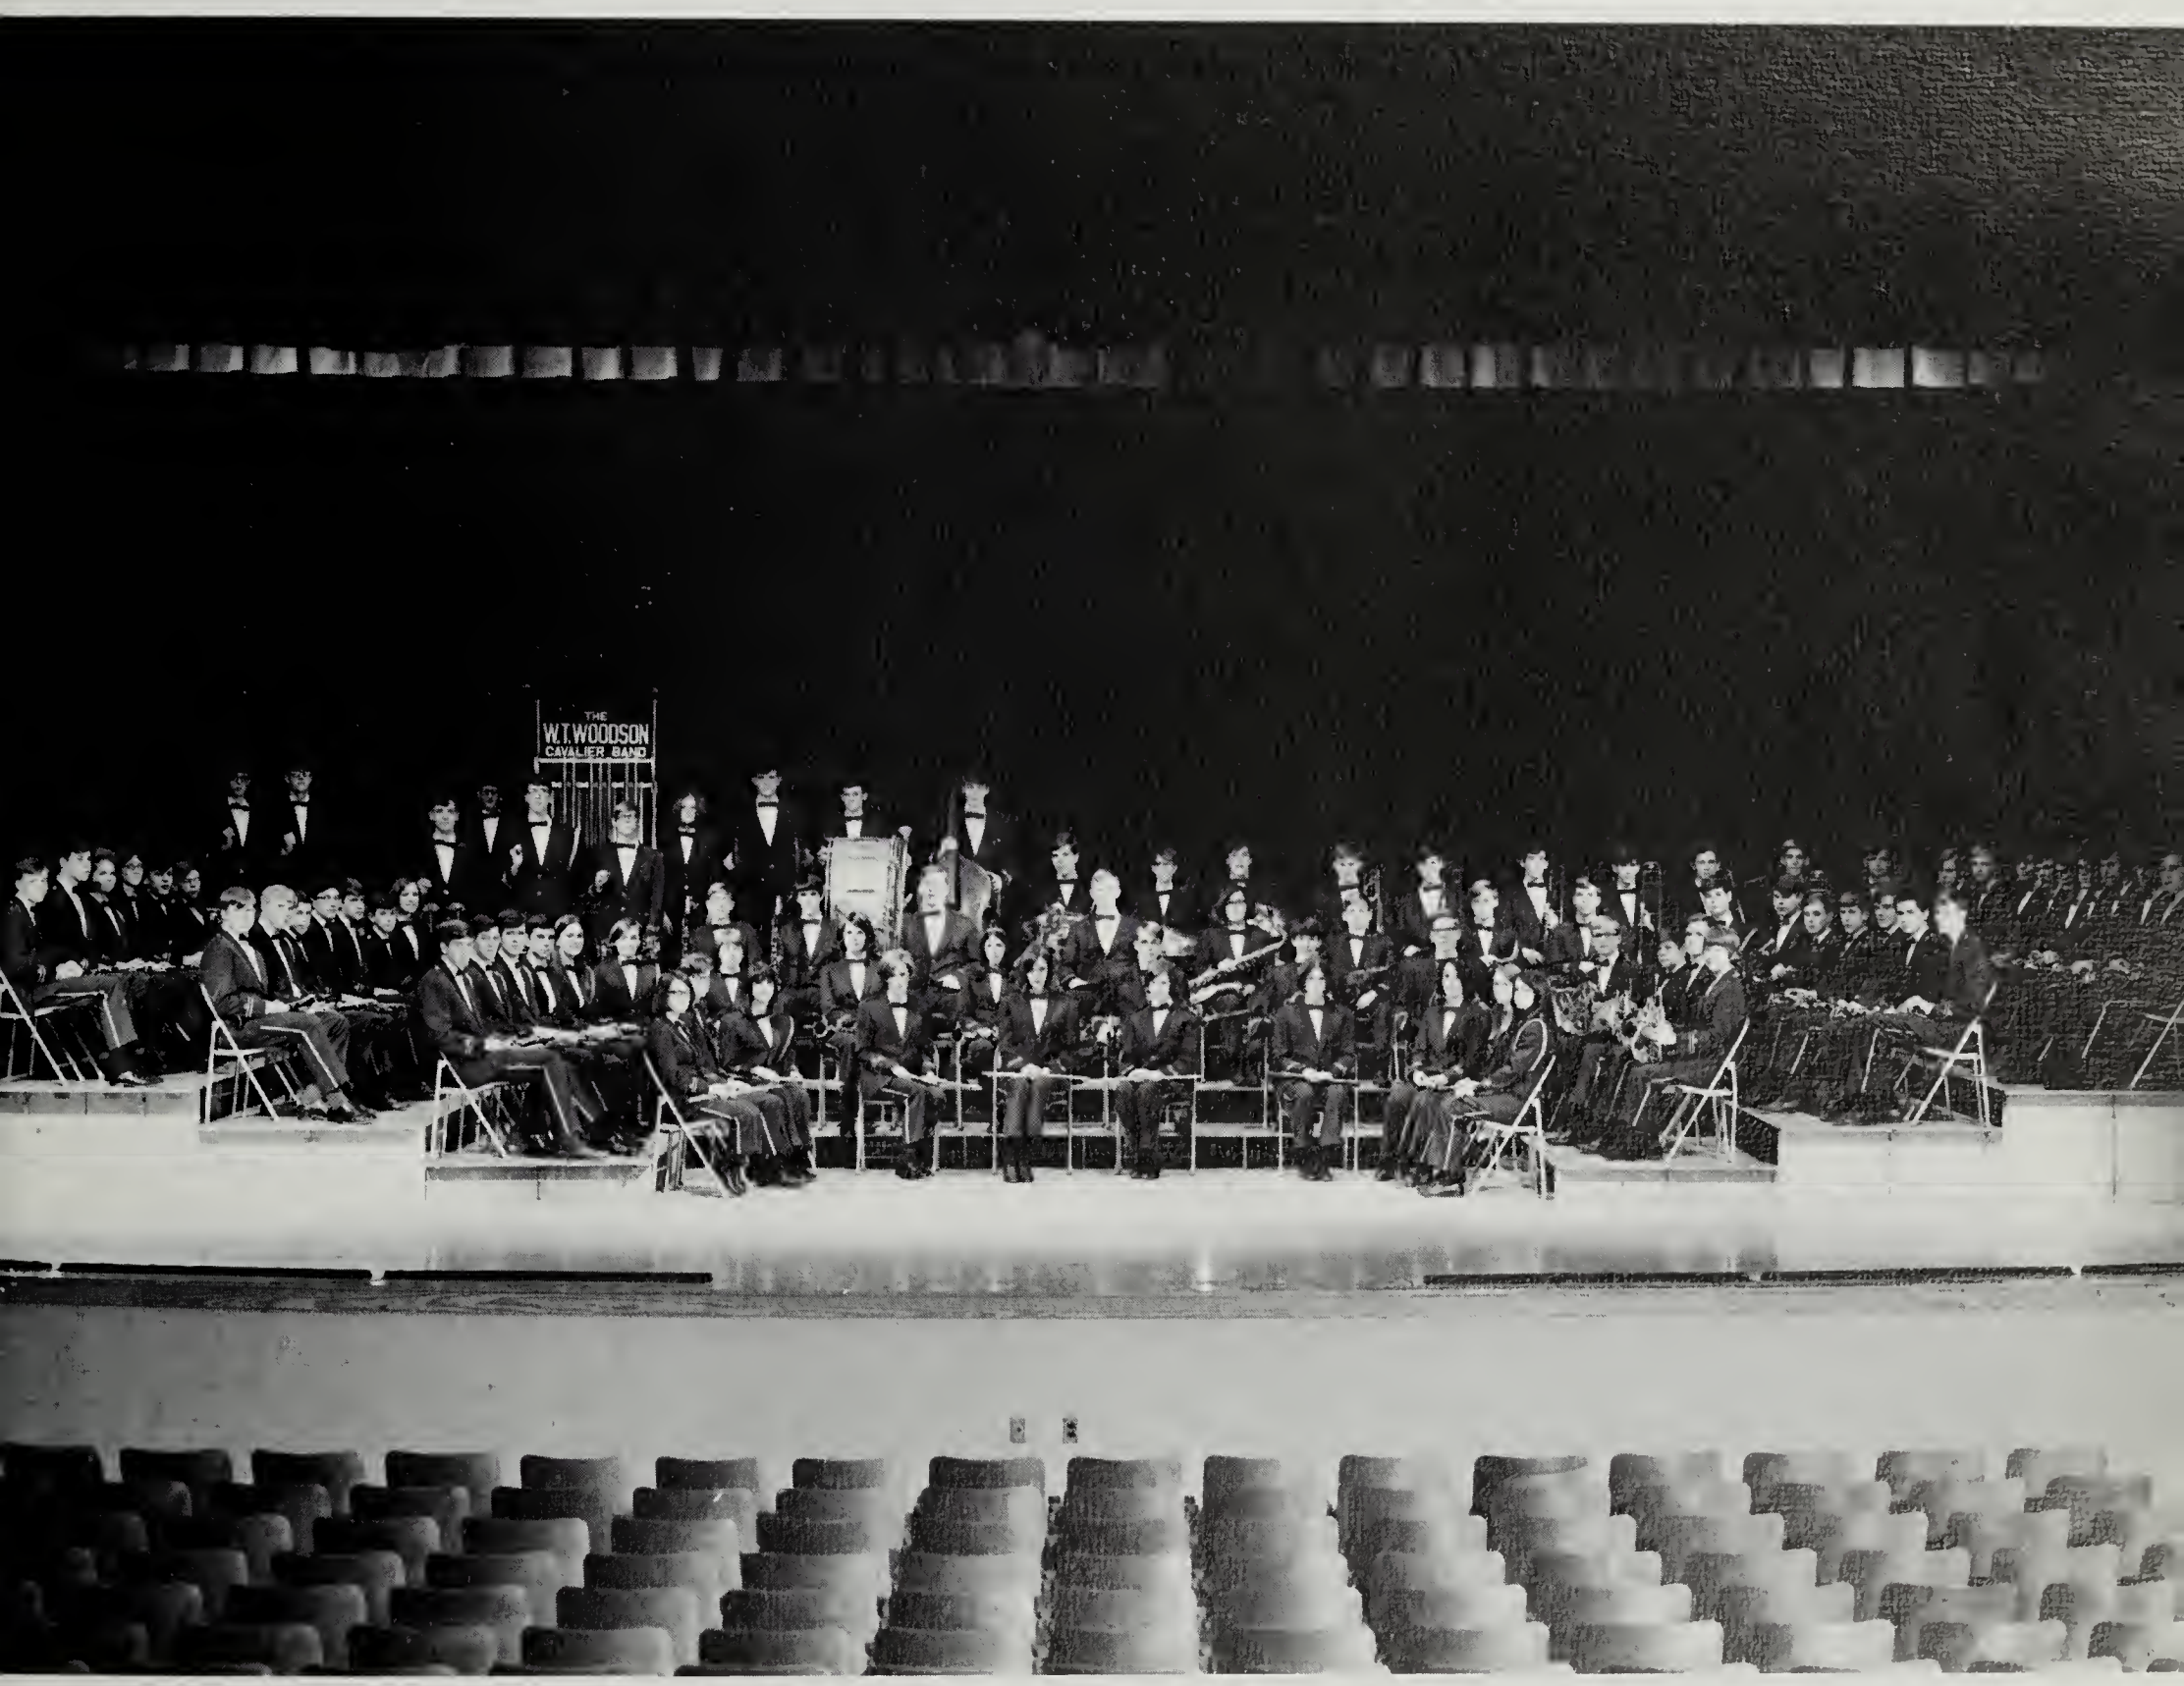

SYMPHONIC BAND

The Marching Cavaliers sounded off the school year performing precision drills at the football halftime shows, instilling school spirit within every spectator with each "Kill", the fast-paced drum cheer.

After football season, the Symphonic Band stressed concert music. Joining the choirs in February, the band produced the yearly EXTRAVAGANZA. In March, the band placed very high among local schools in the District Band Festival. To climax the year, the band accompanied the Class of 1968 for the commencement exercises in June.

CONCERT CHOIR

Concert Choir was kept extremely busy with various programs held annually by the W. T. Woodson High School choir department. At the Christmas Concert, their first appearance, the choir had the dubious honor of being showered by Ivory soapflakes instead of snow. By this means, a bit of comedy was added to the program, especially during the song "White Christmas" which was sung amid sneezes and giggles.

The Concert Choir added a bit of fantasy to Extravaganza as they portrayed the well known story about the old lady and her shoe. As the curtains opened, the audience viewed a group of 75 young children, all of them running to Mama for their daily meal which consisted of one bowl of gruel. Several songs were sung, but the one which added the most tranquility was "Inch Worm."

SYMPHONIC CHOIR

"Man who has class in sewer has mind in gutter," was the gem of wisdom which brought the finale to "A School for Scandals.". The skit, performed by the Symphonic Choir was a light-hearted tale of Chadsworth, a brilliant goody-good who became mixed up with a group of corruptive hoods while attending classes in a sewer. Generously, the hoods offered to further Chadsworth's education by acquainting him with such handy conveniences as pickpocketing. Instead of furthering his education, they succeeded in destroying it.

"Pick a Little, Take a Little" and "Come Home Bill Baily" were two familiar songs sung by the talented Symphonic Choir in Extravaganza.

The Cavalier Chorale, formerly Woodson's "Madrigal Singers," specialized in performing show music, jazz, ballads and folksongs.

Jack Alix of WPGC radio station explains the details of a concert to be given at Woodson in cooperation with the WTW music department.

TREBLE CHOIR

Treble Choir, the novice of the Choral Department, made its debut at the Christmas Concert dressed in costumes reminiscent of the "Gay Nineties" under the direction of Mr. Grant.

At Extravaganza the choir represented a group of pirates looking for the Golden Garter. Capturing a thief suspected of stealing their precious jewels, the girls sang "Baubles, Bangles, and Beads" after the thief's shirt tore, exposing the stolen items.

FRESHMAN CHOIR

Because the Freshman choir consists solely of the fair sex, Mr. Grant can sometimes be seen turning various shades of crimson reprimanding the girls' demeanor, or expounding his abhorrence of "yakkety women" to the nearest listener. Nonetheless, he has said that he enjoys working with the girls and adds that the choir is among the best of its kind in the area.

The freshman choir's "debut" was in the Christmas Concert in December. The girls were dressed, all ready for bed, anticipating the arrival of that revered saint of Christmas, Santa Claus. To pass the time away, the girls sang various songs and carols, beginning with an old German carol, "La La Bye" and ending with "Have Yourself A Merry Little Christmas."

For Extravaganza, the choir depicted love-struck Martians in green, inhuman-looking costumes. To open their act, ten girls performed a modern dance called "Dance of the Molecules" followed by the song "Green Eyes." An American space ship landed on "Mars" and the Martians fell in love with the guitar-playing robot. The girls then sang "Fly Me to the Earth," a variation on the song "Fly Me to the Moon," and closed with the popular song "Up Up and Away."

LATIN CLUB

"Faster slave. We must get to the banquet table as quickly as possible." This was the jovial scene at the Latin Club Banquet in March. Students dressed in togas sitting on the floor were served roast pig by the Freshman club members who acted as slaves.

After studying some of the ancient classics for ideas, the club wrote and presented a skit for the International Dinner and "Saturnalia", a Christmas party for all Latin Clubs in Fairfax County.

Then in late spring, the Latin Club ended the year's activities at a picnic given by Mrs. Mathers, club sponsor, on her farm.

FRENCH CLUB

"Poor Bitos," Jean Anouillh's interpretation of the French Revolution, sent French Club members back through the centuries to the year 1789 with its mob riots and court pomp and splendor.

In February, the French Club members, after stuffing themselves with coq au vin and camembert cheese, visited the National Gallery of Art where they studied the different styles of Degas and Picasso.

Kathy Becker, French Club President, listens to a suggestion from the floor concerning the French Club's annual banquet at one of the bi-monthly meetings.

Spanish Club

Learning about other parts of the world was the collective aim of the language clubs this year. Through the SAVE THE CHILDREN FEDERATION, the clubs adopted Reinaldo Holguin, a nine-year-old from La Julia, Columbia, a mountain village of 45 families. Letters written by Reinaldo told how, with the money the clubs sent, he had bought shoes to wear to school and a cow to provide for his family's need of milk.

The Spanish Club earned money to send Reinaldo by selling corsages in accordance with Fairfax Florists prior to all school dances. The corsages of roses, chrysanthemums, or carnations set off not only a lovely dress, but a beautiful girl.

Miriam Nunez, Woodson's foreign exchange student, points to her South American home, Ecuador, as Spanish Club President Shelley McInnes looks on.

German Club

The German Club delved into a busy agenda late in December after a change in sponsors and presidents caused a few moments of confusion. A party to celebrate Saint Nicholas' birthday was given on December 6. On a visit to the German Embassy, members were pleasantly surprised when they received greetings and a handshake from the German ambassador.

In February, the German Club assisted in sponsoring the International Ball. Students wore costumes typical to the language club they represented. Delicious food spread out on six tables offered the guests a taste of the unusual.

Art Guild

Plastered with psychedelic shades of greens, golds, reds and blues, Art Guild members crouched awkwardly over their prized masterpieces. Imagination, initiative, and creativity merged to create "the final touches that brightened the bland walls of our school."

A mural depicting a typical "cluster of students between classtime" flattered Cafeteria A and gave hungry students something other to look at than the feeding of many famished faces.

Befuddled students in search of excellent, inexpensive Christmas gifts had their prayers answered with the hand-painted stationery and colorful enamel pins designed by Art Guild members.

Mrs. Sally Elliott, Art Guild sponsor, shows amazing artistic talent by demonstrating the proper technique for an abstract painting.

Modern Dance

"First position—plie, second position—plie . . . point those toes! Gracefully girls, GRACEFULLY!! Head erect, shoulders back, don't slouch, watch those bent elbows . . . All right, third position—plie."

Typical of what could be heard during practice, awed spectators sympathetically watched exhausted girls undergoing strenuous workouts.

The dancer's year began with a struggle to regain the flexibility lost over the summer. Grunts and groans reverberated from one harvest-gold wall to the next, as the not-so-willowy dancers strained their stubbornly stiff muscles to relent to pliable contortions.

Finally, after a month of wearisome exertion, the dancers were ready to choreograph their own zesty dances to be presented in April before a crowd of twenty-six hundred.

Math Team

Unheralded by cheerleaders and crowds, the Math team labored silently to bring victory to Woodson.

At meets, the team competed with five different schools. Their main drive was to achieve the highest percentage of correct answers in the alloted time, enabling themselves to win.

After-school practices, under the supervision of Coach Pierce, helped to train the team to meet the challenge of difficult problems in different phases of mathematics.

Bruce Gordon, It's Academic team captain, is caught by our camera doing what he does best: research.

IT'S ACADEMIC: Gerald Johnson, Donald Tepper, Bruce Gordon.

It's Academic

On October 14, three representatives from Woodson competed against Elizabeth Setan and Thomas Jefferson High Schools on "It's Academic." Bruce Gordon, Gerald L. Johnson, and Don Tepper comprised the Woodson team, with Tom Bates, John Pitas, and Whit Hollis backing them up as alternates.

The show was televised on WRC-TV, Channel 4 on Saturday, November 11. Giant Foods sponsored the show, and awarded scholarship grants to all three competing teams.

The contest remained close up until the last section of the program, when Woodson fell behind. Our team finished third.

Bruce Gordon lead the team as captain, and Mrs. Carmichael of the English Department, was their sponsor.

Subterranean Science

You go where? Caving, you mean you go underground with bats and everything? Ah, you're putting me on!

The members of the Subterranean Science Club weren't "putting people on" when they said they traipsed in and out of cavities in the ground. However, exageration was expected.

A whole new world awaited the spelunker as he (or she) left personal desires for cozy comfort to wallow in gooey mud and worm his way through tight claustrophobic passages.

The kind of caving that the Subterranean Science Club did was for the thrill of exploration and discovery, not for scientific research.

The standard question asked about the members' activity was, "IT was pretty dangerous, wasn't it?" The standard reply was, "The most dangerous part of the entire excursion was driving to the cave."

Science Research

Deep underground, beneath a chemistry room, members of the FSA Science Research Club were in their greatest glory. A cry of victory resounded from the throat of President Jim Long. "We did it! We discovered a way to make meatballs without onions." This was definitely a boon for the Cafeteria cooks. A sour note was failing to make chocolate icing taste like something other than peanut butter.

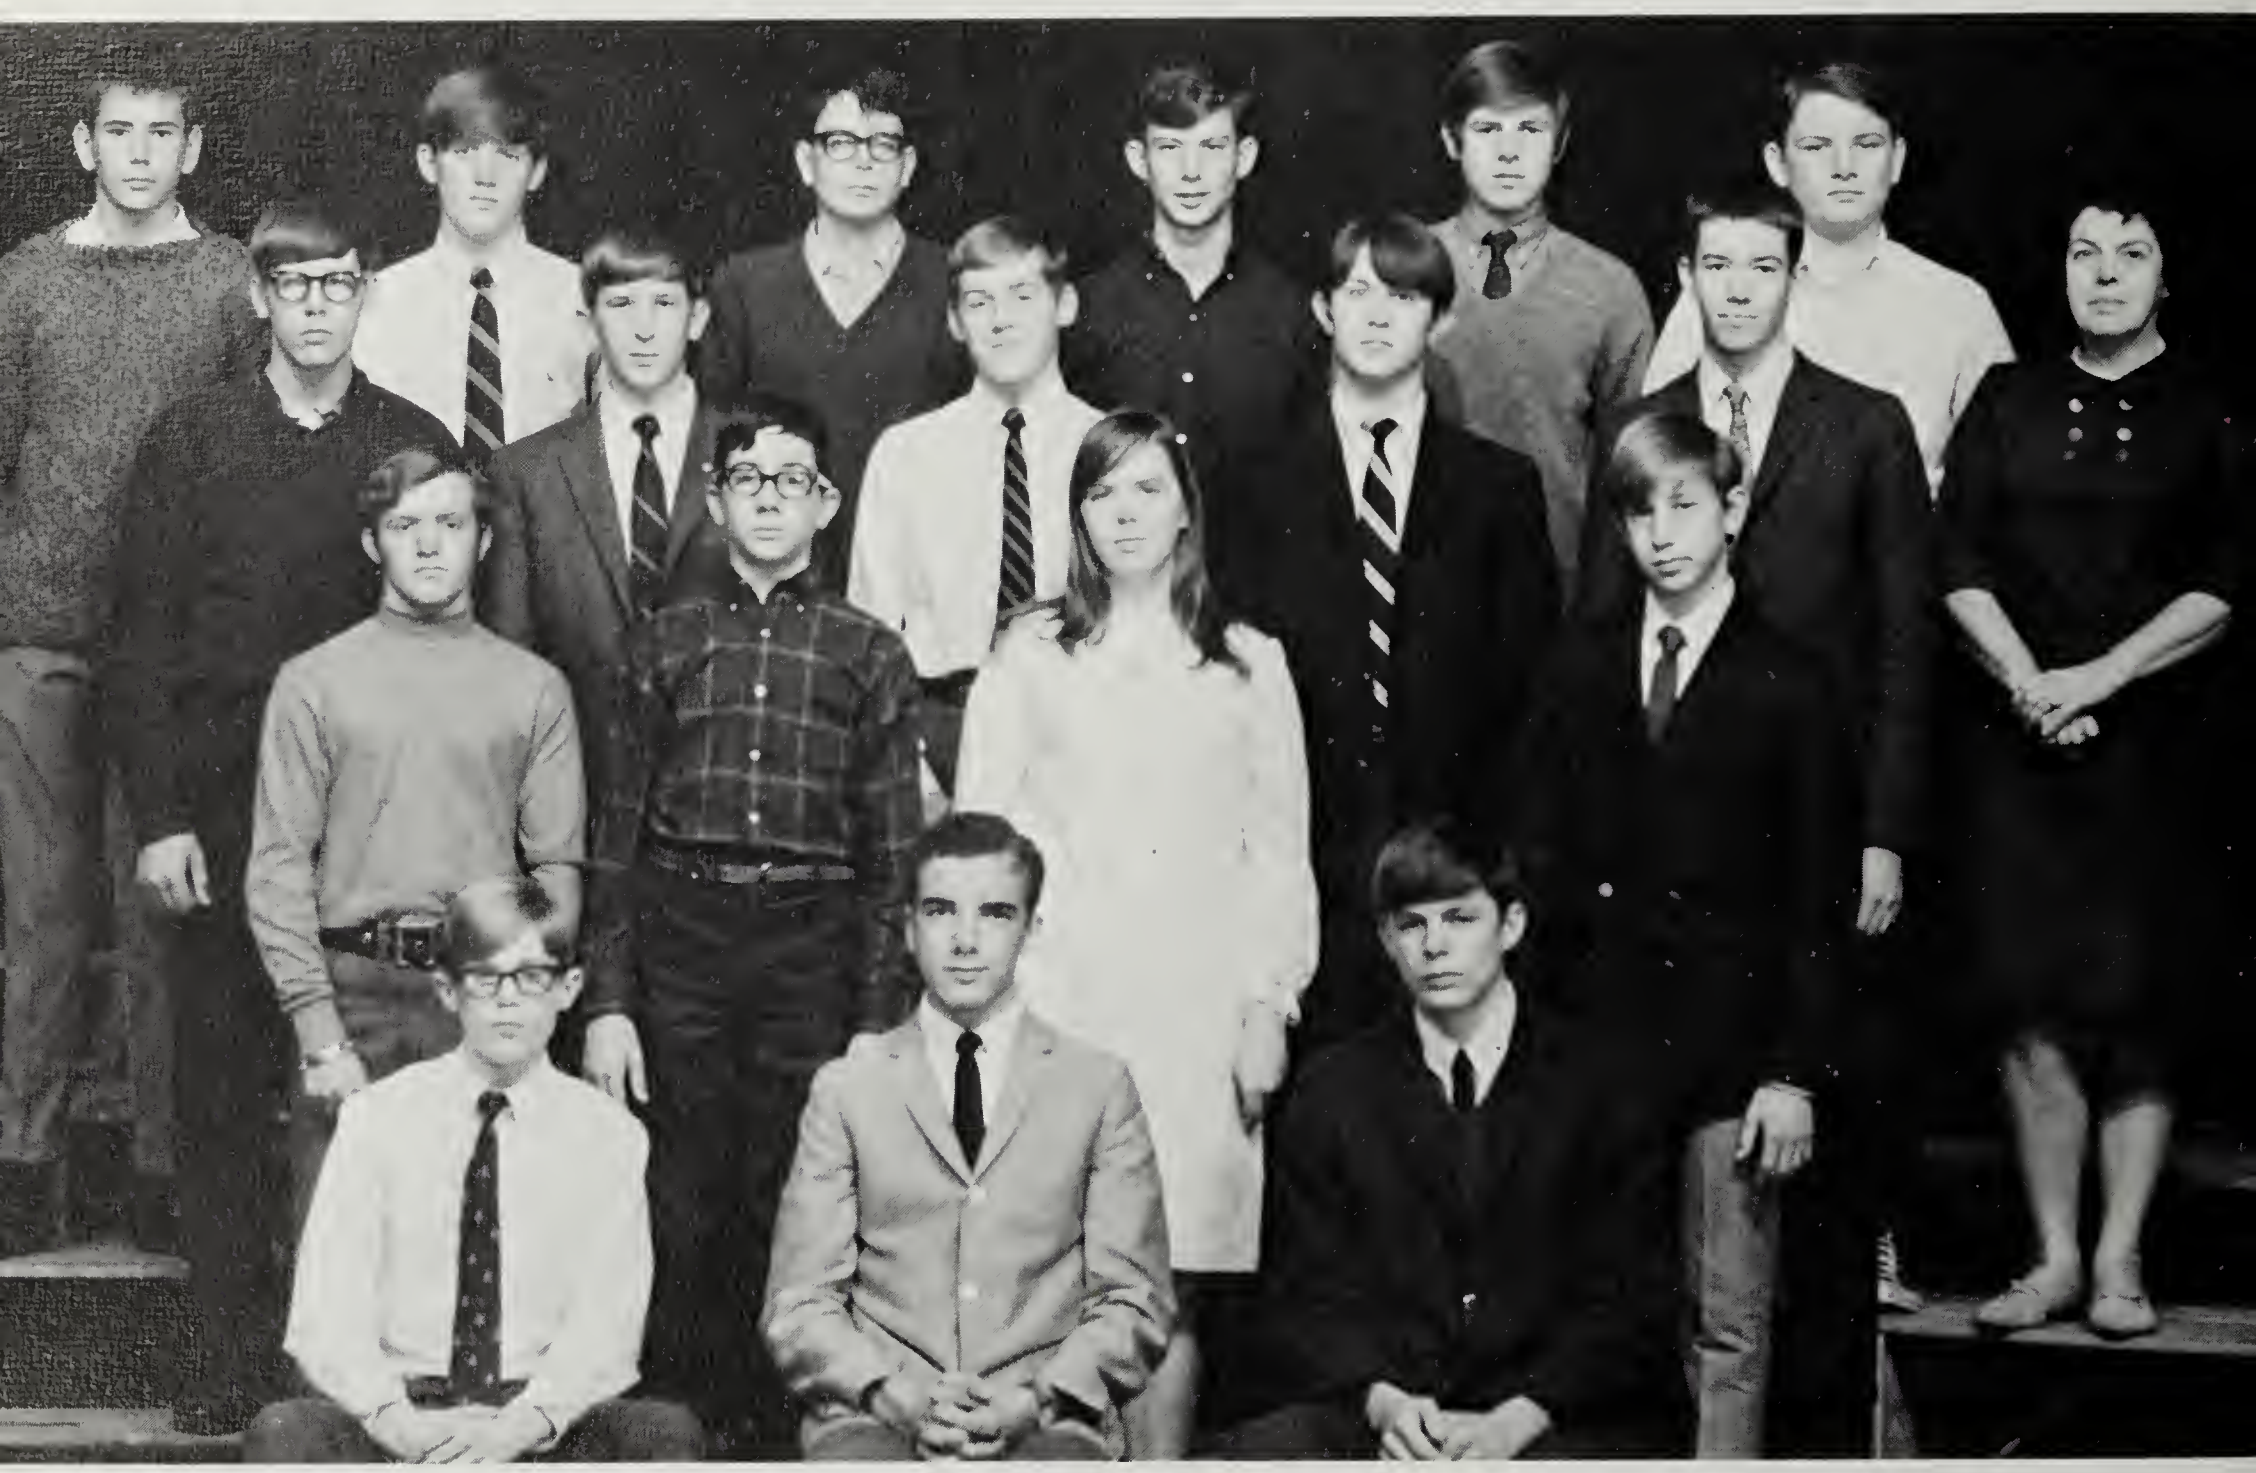

Although members never really reached this height of achievement, they all had an unmistakable interest in science. Individual members were captivated as they researched lunar distances and chromosomal abberrations. Naval Research lab lectures, organization of and participation in Science Fairs, and a field trip to the Government Radio Astronomy Research Installation in Greenbank, West Virginia, kept members in touch with current science.

The club added the astronomy committe as an appendage to its main organization. Jack Woodside, the president-elect of the Virginia Junior Academy of Sciences, led in gaining a knowledge of practical astronomy.

Varoom, sputter, putt putt, sputter, sputter . . . the Flying Club had difficulty getting off the run-way before completing their pre-flight ground course.

Diligently, the student aviators dived into their "Sanderson Manuals" and researched meterology, navigation and Radio and F.A.A. Regulations.

Scrutinizing aeronautical terms may have become hum-drum, had it not been for: field trips to Leesburg traffic control tower, chartered air-flights at Manasses Airport and the challenge of obtaining a solo license. Except for one feminine figure, the club consisted of a group of masculine dare devils. Mrs. Banks, the club sponsor, bolstered Becky Spiher's morale by proving to the "guys" that "delicate gals" could be equally adventurous.

Anthropology Club

Going on "digs" might sound like a good activity for perspective prospectors, well excavators, or fence installers, but as it turns out, these digs are for ancient artifacts. Behind the shovels, picks, and sifters, are not the calloused hands of outdoor workers, but the inquisitive minds of members of the Anthropology Club. Hopefully, the artifacts were possessions of the ancient Indians or maybe relics of our own colonial or civil war era. The Anthropology Club, under the leadership of Mrs. Peters, was new to the Woodson scene.

It is easy to forget that there was a population of men in this area thousands of years before Columbus, or the Vikings. It is even easier not to realize that since the time when the first Indians arrived to the present, millions of people have lived here and died. We put little emphasis on the daily life of the people and the little things that went about each day. In obtaining anthropological information and artifacts it is possible to see the life of the people of that period and really know what history is.

Medical Careers

"Scapel, anesthesia, sutures." Although members of the Medical Careers Club didn't actually perform operations, the past year proved to be far from dull. A trip to the University of Virginia, volunteer work at Junior Village, and guest lectures revealed vast opportunities open in the various fields of medicine.

Intramural Council

"The Intramural Council tries to set up activities in which even the weakest can participate," according to Miss Harvalik, the Council's sponsor. Students compete against each other in such sports as volleyball, gymnastics, and track and field. In the spring, a play day was held with local high schools vieing with each other for top honors.

History Forum

Emphasis was placed on the history of Fairfax County as students in the Forum on American History located and identified numerous historical landmarks.

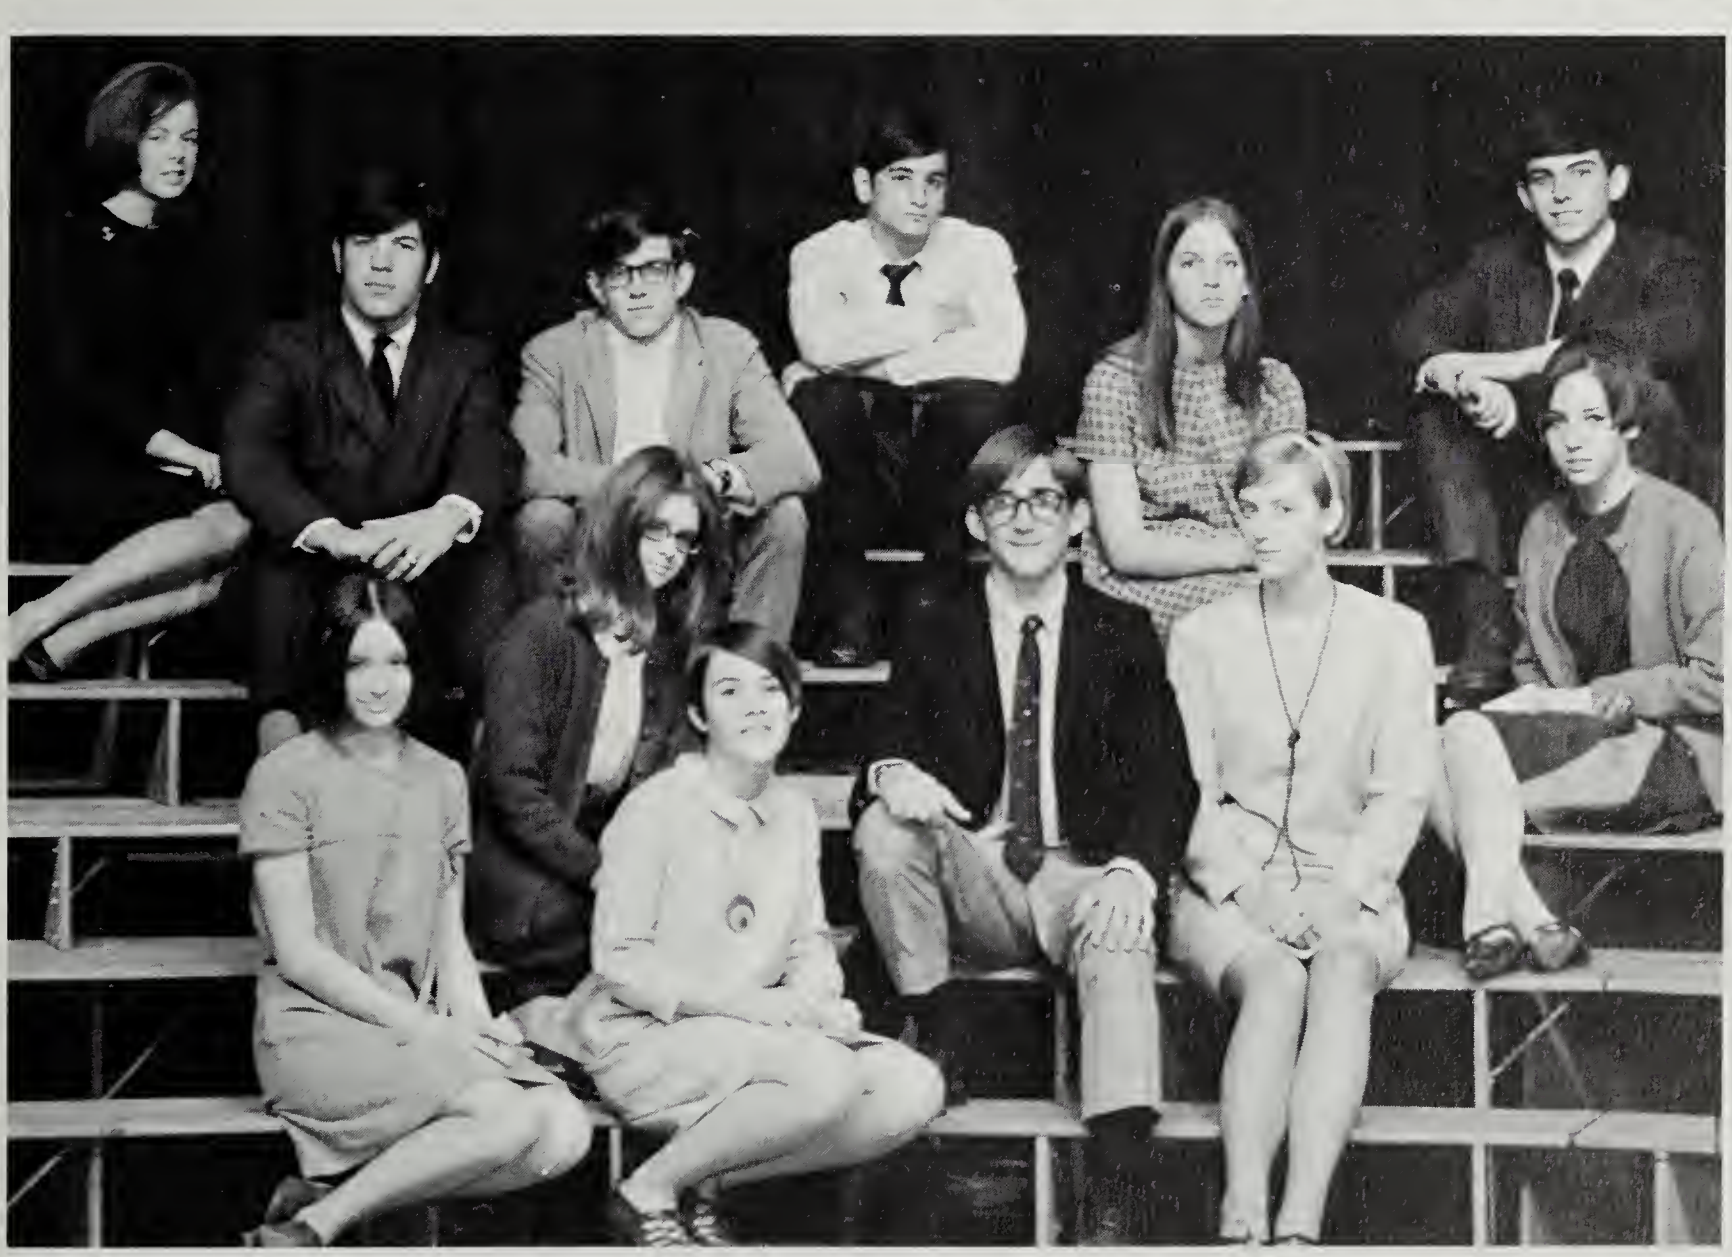

The organization dedicatedly searched for letters, documents, and other records of historical value. These original papers, along with a micro-film reader, were purchased with funds collected from Woodson's booming bookstore business and placed in the library. In American Civilization Seminars, guest speakers lectured on subjects in the fields of history, literature, and architecture.

Folklore Society

On Fridays, everyone went home, everyone that is but the Folklore Society. The sad, melodious strain of a voice singing Blues music filtered through wooden doors, concrete walls and into lonely halls. These words, meshed into the gently strumming sound of the guitar, permeated the soul and transformed a carefree world into one of thought and seriousness.

Jeanie Feagan, Pat Blazey, and Jim Cook look on as Diana Styer plays the guitar during an informal gathering of several Folklore Society members.

Bridge Club

Shuffle, slam, double!! Contracts were bid, made, doubled, and redoubled as the ripple of cards became the background music of the tournament room.

The Bridge Club was designed for those students interested in promoting bridge as a sport and game. Each morning the card-sharks met in room 236 to perfect their skills and prepare for future matches.

The Junior-Senior tournament was the big event of the year as the two classes carried on a brain-straining game in hopes of attaining "bridge-master" fame.

Chess Club

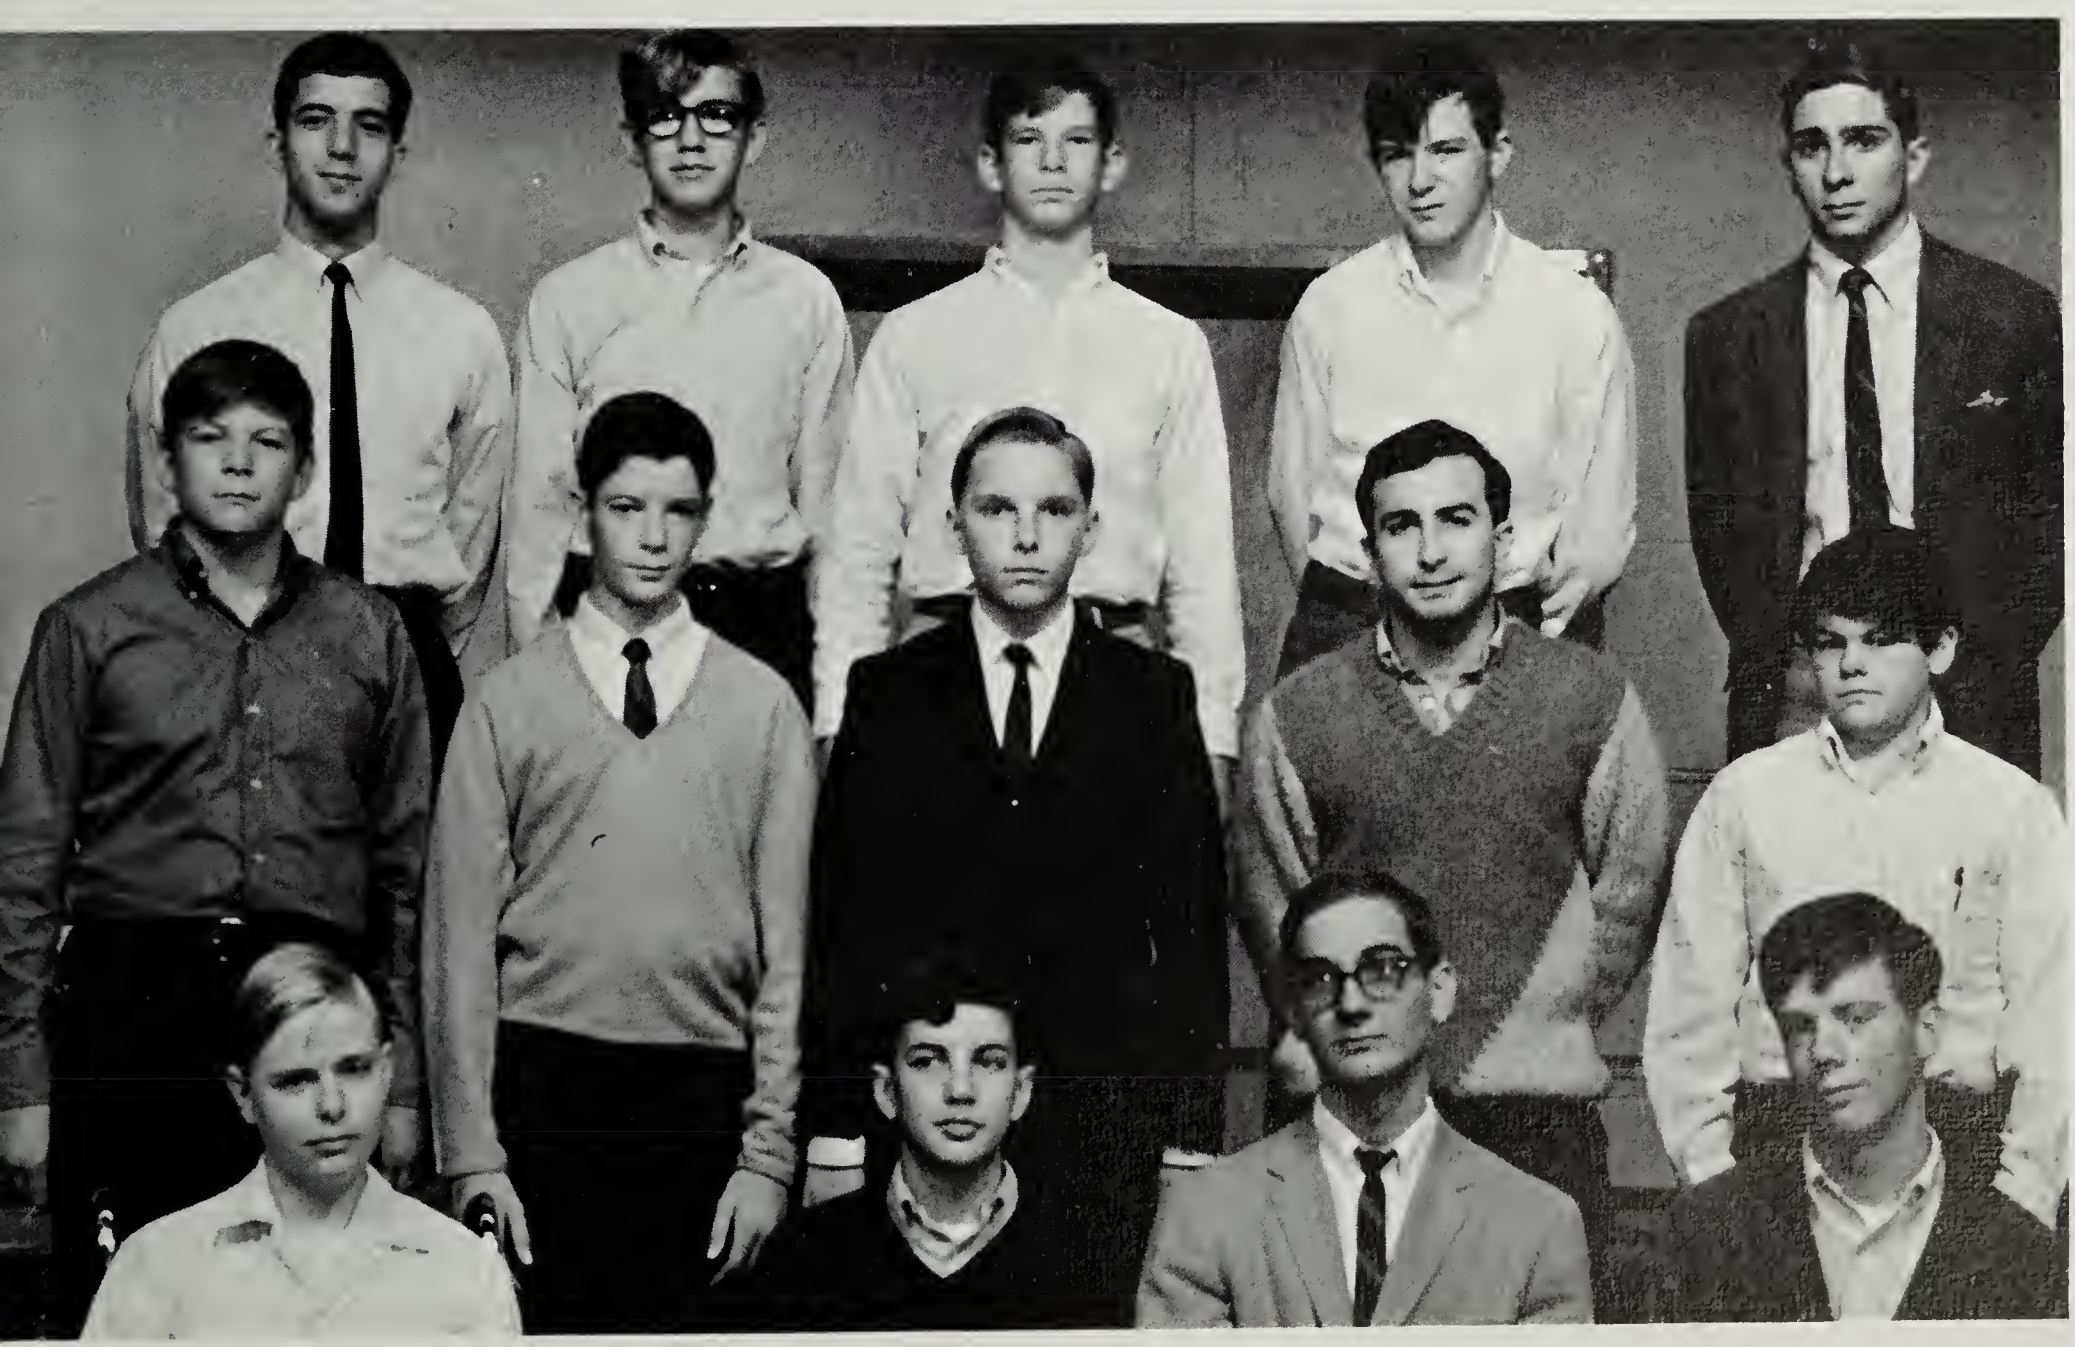

Not only must we admire members of the Chess Club for the imagination, intelligence, and foresight necessary to play a successful game of chess, but also we must esteem their ability to keep their eyes in focus over such long stretches. It is no mean feat to stare for periods of time without a break in concentration at the psychedelic pattern of a chessboard.

At each meeting members found an opponent and sat down to destroy him, his army vs. the adversaries'. It was victory or death.

Always expecting to win, never intending to lose, whether in victory or defeat, the generals on either side of the board were full of conversation, jokes, and enjoyment as the battles were fought.

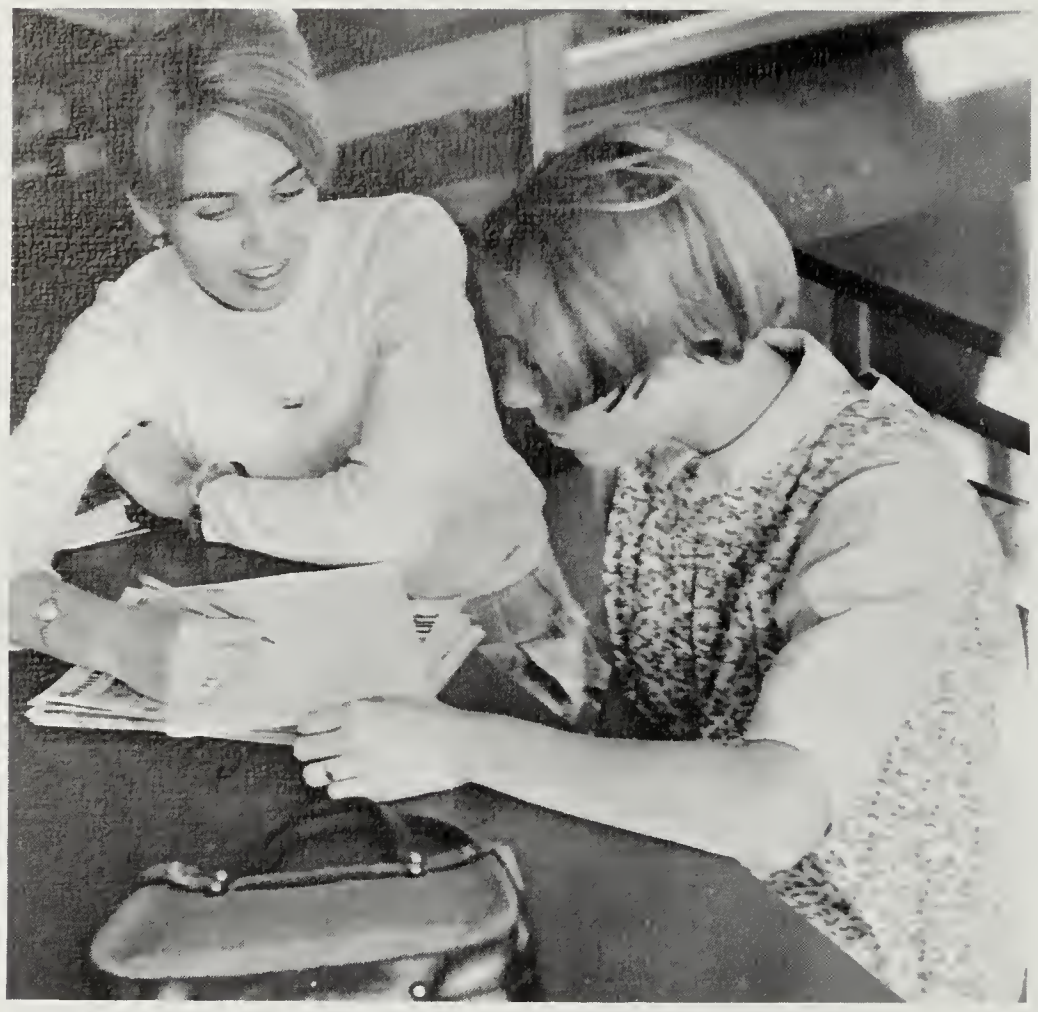

Jeff Dunson and Bill DeLano are a study in concentration as they think of brilliant gambits to foil each other. As you can see, Jeff is fighting a losing battle.

TRI HI Y

"Hey, Porky, would you like to buy a box of candy?"
"What kind?"
"Super low-cal chocolate mints!"
"Low-cal, huh? Gimmie half a dozen."

These words rang through crowded hallways at the beginning of the year, as each gorgeous girl in the Tri Hi Y tried to sell her twelve boxes to a diet-ridden student body.

An original idea, a fortune cookie sale, was cooked up by the Tri Hi Y for the first time this year. The school's Lost and Found relieved the anxiety and the fearful frustration, "Why mother's gonna kill me when I get home!"

The Tri Hi Y treated delighted orphans to a Christmas party and devoted afternoons and weekends industriously working in the Walter Reed Hospital.

Pat Davis, Tri Hi Y President, and her "sister", Pat Husca, plan future Tri Hi Y events. Each of the girls has a "sister" to help her out.

ICT

Professionals, not hacks, were the goal of Woodson's Industrial Co-operative Training. Their "modus operandi" was like an employment agency. The perspective employer in a skilled profession contacted the Woodson I.C.T. co-ordinator, Mr. Workman, and established the need for a certain employee. The students interested in this type of profession were subsequently interviewed and hopefully one fit the bill.

By the time the junior or senior graduates, he will have had enough basis in his or her chosen profession to carry the load.

The big draw for area business in getting I.C.T. Students was that the employers could train and develop their selected employees in their own way, under their own supervision. This training involved not just pumping gas or any other job that the employer would fill by any kid on the street, but the internal operation of management and production.

The I.C.T. boy or girl participant was occupationally trained in high school, learning skills and knowledge which would help him find productive employment.

Distributive Education

With the common ground of a desire for education and training in marketing and distribution, members of D.E.C.A. had a head start in the business world. These members of the Distributive Education Clubs of America attended school for half a day and then left for on-the-job training in the skills that dealt with the distribution of products.

Meetings were held twice a month at the Old Dutch Inn Restaurant in Falls Church, where members commented that D.E.C.A. "is not a social gathering, but a place where they can learn to understand and appreciate our free, competitive enterprise system."

The Office and Guidance Department assistants were considered the "Angels of Mercy" when they entered the classrooms with pink slips, as hopeful students crossed their fingers and thought, "It has to be for me!"

Assistants served as the right arm to the teachers of chemistry, biology, art, and phys. ed. Grading papers, running errands, shelving books, and taking roll were all a part of their everyday duties. Although they were offered bribes by many a conscientious student, they were known for their honesty and help.

SPORTS

Cheerleaders shout, the crowd echos.

Autumn bites and Cavaliers score.

Away from the anxiety of paperwork and tests,

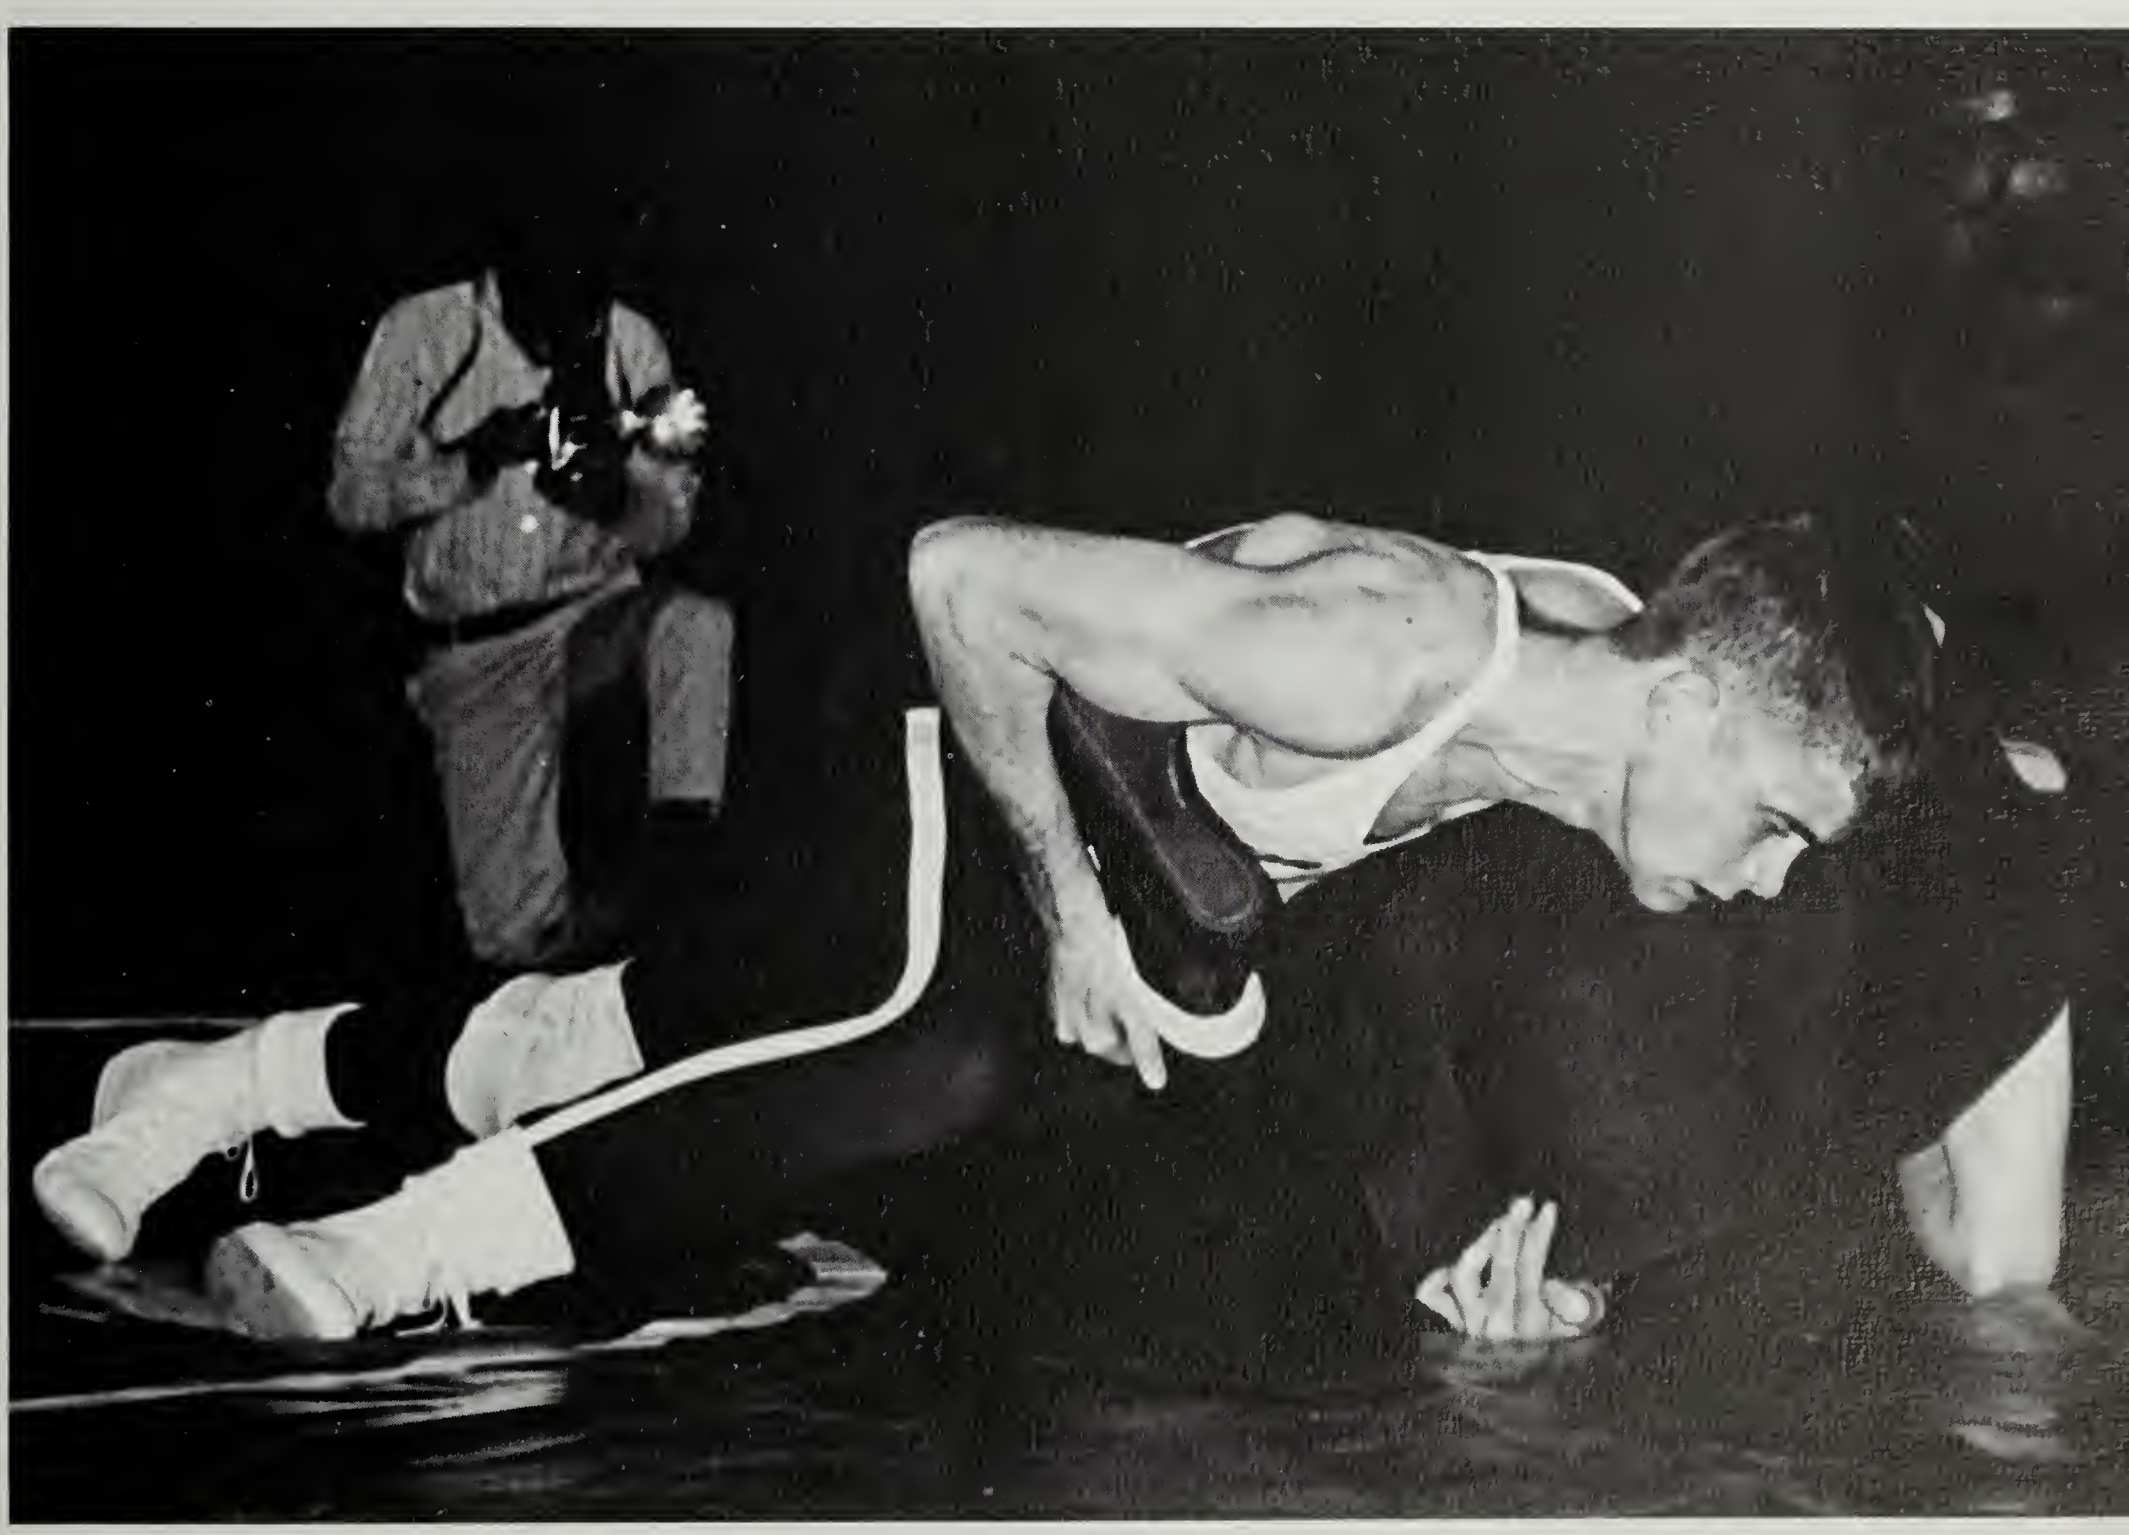

Enjoy . . . let loose

Sports at Woodson unites all thoughts of victory, all hopes to Cavaliers,
all energy to spirit.

Shout until hoarse . . . enjoy.

Pursue the glory of the physical accomplishment,

Win for the record,
Win for the team,
Win for Woodson.

Inspirited with Cavalier buoyency and effervescence, the J. V. Cheerleaders were handicapped during the 67-68 seasons by the obvious lack of student support at Junior Varsity games. The ten sophomore girls, displaying the kind of exhuberance usually noted in Varsity squads, were generally backed up by as few as fifteen to twenty parents of the J. V. players or a few stray Cavaliers who had wandered out to the bleachers following an afternoon club meeting. In spite of this atmosphere of meager concern which dominated a majority of the J. V. games, the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders demonstrated to those who did attend that the girls are strong prospects for next year's Varsity squad.

Speaking for the Freshman squad, Jan Stevens remarked, "All of us felt really proud backing up such a terrific team. And with the record they set this year, all the freshmen are looking forward to a great Varsity Season in 1970!" The girls were selected during the second week of September, and began preparations for the coming year much later than either the J.V. or Varsity squads. The vivacious girls elected Kathy Frazier captain, and she dauntlessly led them into that renowned world of saddle shoes, pom poms, and personalized megaphones. Clad in the traditional white uniforms of the freshmen, the squad first appeared before their class at an orientation assembly in the fall. They helped establish a bond between the freshmen and their team which formed one strong link in the chain of unity between the Freshman class and WTW.

After taking a hand-off from quarterback Tracy Bridges (11), Terri Jukes is stopped cold by three of his Annandale opponents. The Cavaliers gave the Atoms a good fight; however, fumbles hurt them severely as Annandale edged Woodson, 13-12.

Tim Tennant leaps high into the air to deflect a pass away from a would-be Fairfax receiver. Such fine definsive manuevers as this, as well as six intercepted passes, helped the Cavaliers to down the Rebels, 40-0.

Looking for an opening in the Fairfax defense, Jimmy Jukes runs to the near side where he is met by one of his Rebel opponents. Jim received the Metropolitan Area-Outstanding Back Award from the Washington Touchdown Club, gaining 1,183 yards in 132 carries, averaging 8.9 yards per carry, and finishing with a Varsity career total of 1,850 yards rushing.

Unable to find a target, during the game against Fairfax, Tracy Bridges wisely decides to run with the ball. Tracy skillfully foiled his would-be tackler and went the rest of the way for a touchdown.

The Cavalier defense blitzes through the Atom offense, pouncing on the Annandale ball carrier. Piling up on the Annandale halfback are Vernon Gardner(41), Karl Gallegos (82), Les Shelton(67), and Bob Elmore(63).

Running downfield on the kick-off, Fred Schaffer(11) slams into his Fairfax adversary, bringing him down inside the five yard line. The Cavaliers were quite uncooperative in allowing their opponents to score; in fact, they yielded an average of only 5 points per game.

Bill Kuykendall(27) finds running room as he heads down the side line with Jeff Michael(62) serving as his protection on the play. The Jayvees kept the ball moving, during this game against Fairfax, as they defeated the Rebels, 16-7.

Streaking past the Fairfax defense, David Krauser(24) turns on the speed and heads for the end-zone. David, aided by Bob Hendrickson(72), scored on the play, and the Cavaliers won, 20-12.

After some quick manuevers, Don Bonzano(83) intercepts a pass intended for his Fairfax adversary. The Cavaliers, losing to Fort Hunt the previous week, defeated the Rebels to complete the season with a 5-1 record.

On a cold October afternoon, the Girls' Varsity Hockey team huddles together on the field for a quick consultation with coach, Erma Poarch. These meetings helped to strengthen the morale of the team and gave the girls a chance to discuss their strategy. Although their overall season was not a complete success, the girls gained experience as well as a greater sense of sportsmanship.

Julie Wilkins attempts to steal the ball from a Rebel opponent during the Cavalettes' winning bout with Fairfax. Defensive moves such as this enabled the Varsity Hockey team to compile a 2-4-6 record for the overall season.

Cathy Hinecwicz finds standing on her head stimulating while pausing for a hard-earned break during J.V. Hockey practice. The squad, composed of freshmen and sophomores, practiced every afternoon during the school week perfecting the skills that will carry most of them on to Varsity next year.

J. V. HOCKEY: Row 1: Anne Lines, Ginny Kincade, Anne McGuigan, Carol Hallsted (co-captain, Eva Morgan, Pat Pataky (co-captain), Pat Boyle, Mary Lynch, Kathy Kirsch; Row 2: Lin Knighton, Dottie Isaac, Anita Wilburn, Denise Cooper, Betsy Paul, Carolyn Bond, Cathy Hinecwicz, Ginny Kirsch.

Woodson's Varsity and Junior Varsity Cross Country teams completed the season with perfect records, compiling flawless scores against Jefferson and Fairfax by supplying the first five finishing contestants. This was attained by excellent organization, cooperation among the team members, and the coaching of Mr. Eakin.

The boys received notable recognition at the regional meet, ranking second out of nineteen schools and becoming the first Cavalier Cross Country detachment to qualify for the State Competition at William & Mary. The squad, led by Outstanding Runner, Bill Gerring, Larry Montross, Austin Young, Bob Neyers, and Marko Ramariz, placed twelfth among the other regional representatives in Virginia.

In Cross Country, team work is very important; however, so is individual effort. Mr. Eakin, after completing his third season as head coach, described the active participant in the following manner; "Cross Country is basically a nonspectator sport. With this fact evident, the cross country runner seeks more than outward recognition. The reward for the runner's stamina, perseverence, and effort is made manifest through the feeling of self achievement and self satisfaction."

Bob Meyers crosses the finish line of the 2¼ mile cross country course at Woodson, under the watchful eye of Coach Eakin. Bob finished second during this meet against Fairfax as the Cavaliers won, 15-44 (in cross country the victor is determined by the lowest number of points received).

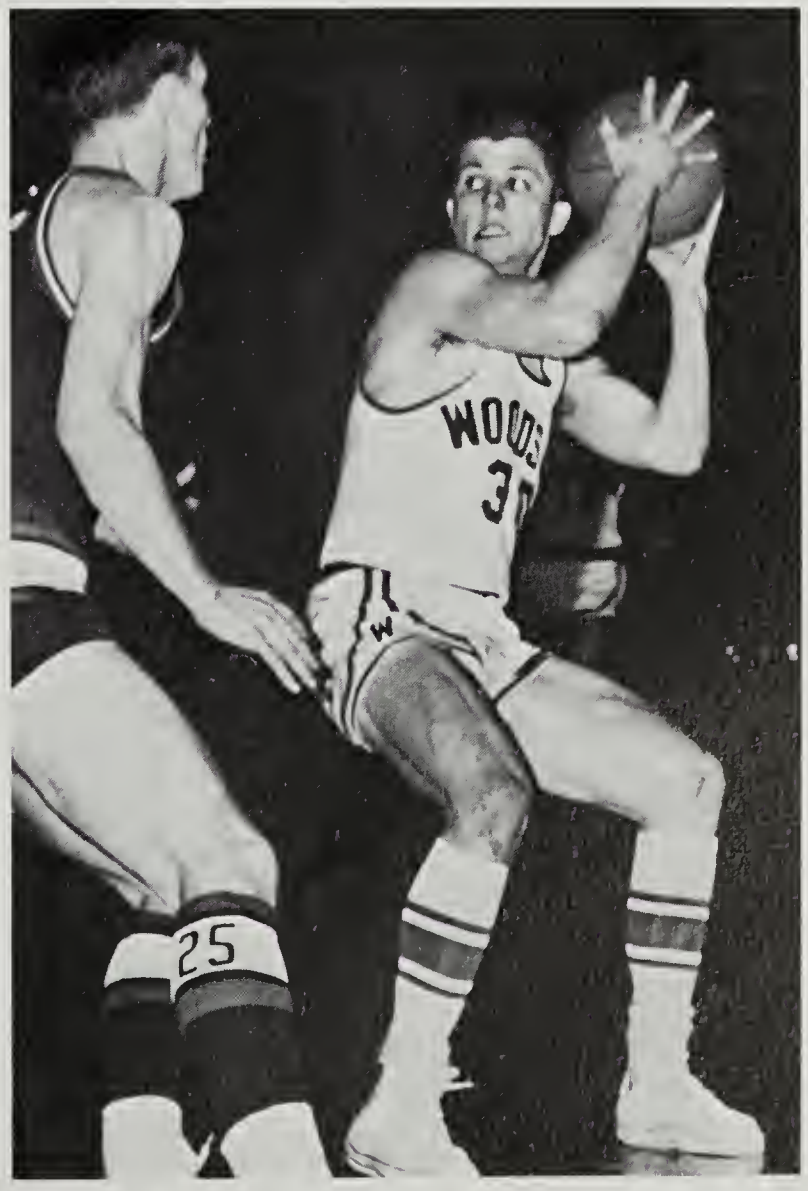

VARSITY BASKETBALL TEAM: Row 1: C. Hoffman, J. Pecorak, J. Jukes, J. Oliverio; Row 2: C. Simpson, T. Jukes, D. Gasper, T. Bridges; Row 3: P. O'Neill, T. J. Pecorak, B. Hearne, J. Knoche, L. Corder.

After working the ball through the General defense, John Pecorak (31) completes his lay-up, adding two more points to the Woodson score. John and his brother, T. J. lead the Woodson attack on Annandale, later in the season, when the Cavaliers downed the Atoms, 92-65, with John scoring eighteen points.

After some rapid passing manuevers, John Oliverio (11) gains two more for the Cavaliers' late rally. However, the Generals halted the Woodson surge winning the game in the final minutes, 49-46.

As Woodson attempts to penetrate the Stuart defense, Chuck Hoffman (30) watches for a pass receiver near the basket. The Cavaliers took over undisputed posession of first place with this victory over the Raiders in overtime, 60-58.

Piercing through the Washington-Lee zone defense, T. J. Pecorak (35) completes his drive with a short jump shot. Although only a sophomore, T. J. was one of the five regular starters, and later, in the game against Stuart, he scored the winning basket in overtime.

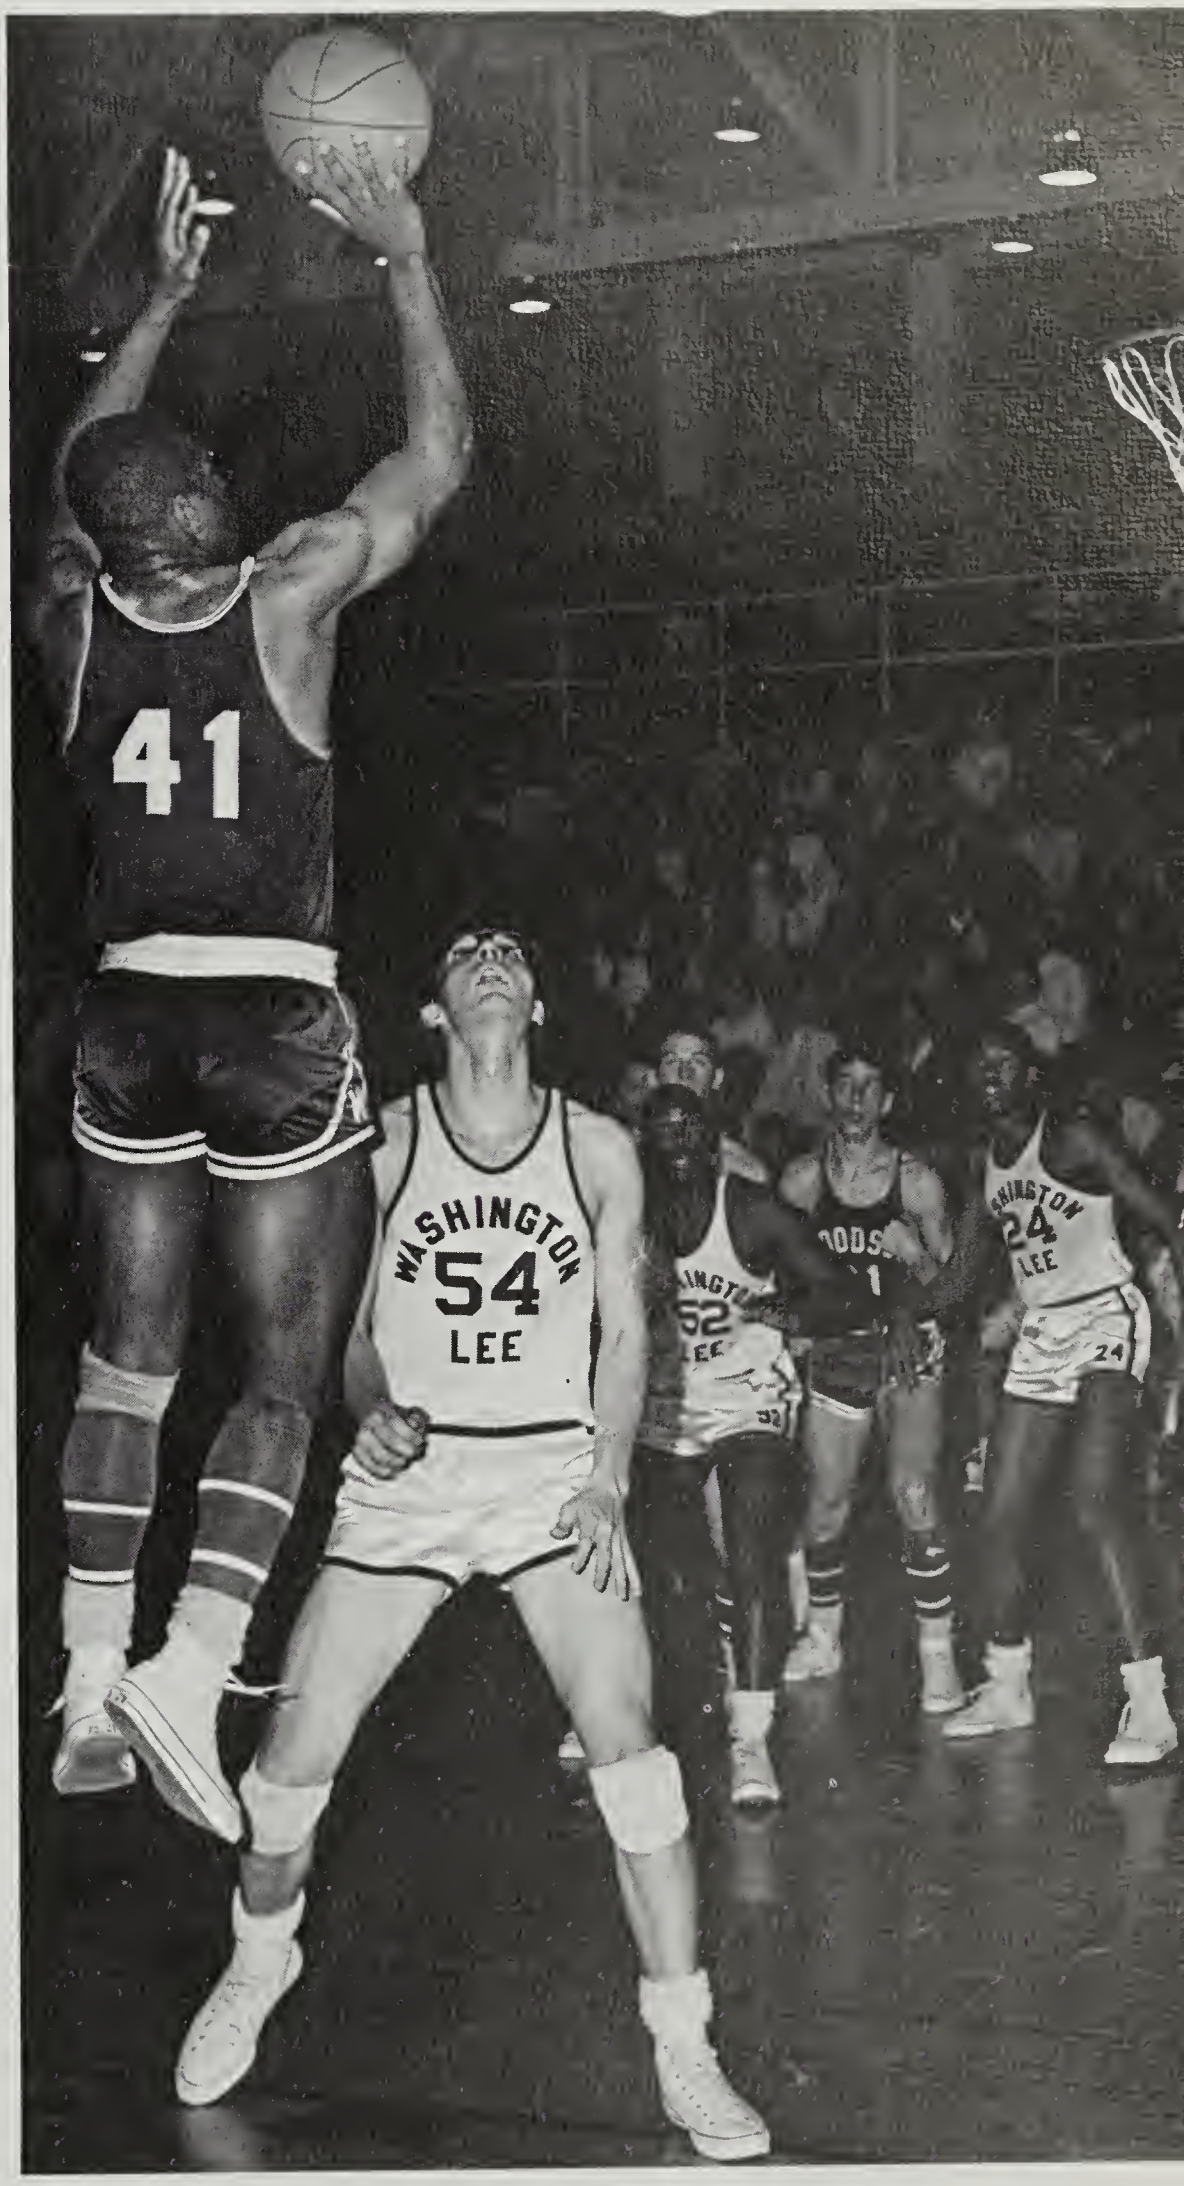

As Washington-Lee's defense weakens momentarily, Bill Hearne (13) moves in for a lay-up and two more points. The starting forward, Bill performed quite well in tight situations, where he saw regular action, scoring nine of the forty-six Woodson points in this game against the Generals.

Leaping high above his Washington - Lee opponent, Jim Jukes (41) takes the opportunity to boost the Woodson score with two more points. Jim was a major participant in Cavalier athletics, contributing to football and track as well as basketball.

Shooting from the side, in order to avoid the Stuart defense, Wayne Dill, the Jayvee's leading rebounder, makes good his effort for a Woodson fieldgoal. The Cavaliers overpowered the Raiders by the score of 62-34.

Following reception of a bounce pass from Bud Kick (54), Keith Michael squeezes a fieldgoal past his close guarding Wakefield defender. The Jayvees finished with a winning season despite this loss to Wakefield, 45-34.

Side-stepping the Wakefield defenders, Bruce Greenberg vaulted into the air to complete a short jump shot. Bob had a fairly successful season averaging 6 points per game and scoring 87 points in 15 games.

RIFLE TEAM

"Ready? Aim. Fire!"

"Another bullseye! That's three in a row."

"That's all for today, boys. Clear the field of any bodies and then go on home."

Mass murder? No. Just another Rifle Team practice. In spite of lack of shooting ranges, and the loss of all but two lettermen, the Varsity Rifle Team finished with a winning season. The credit, in part, goes to Mr. Wilmoth, one of the originators of the Virginia High School Shooting League.

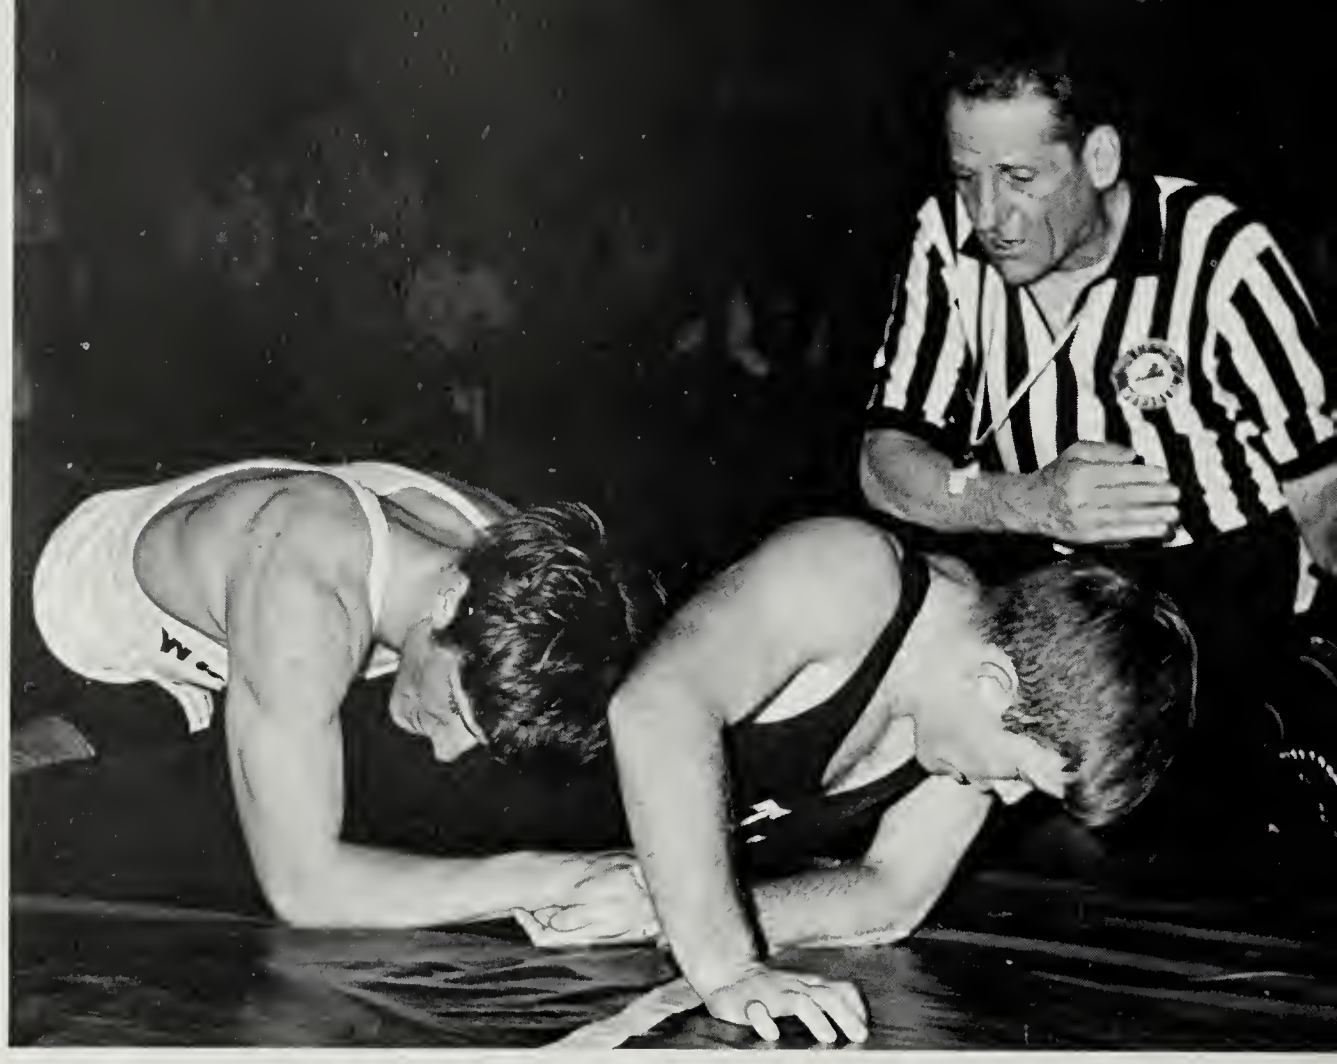

Throughout the season, starters Greg Kalnitsky, Jim May, sophomore Pete Lutz, Co-captains Bill Collier, Bill Enos, and the rest of the team were forced to provide their own transportation, equipment and ammunition. Yet, they practiced every day, diligently striving for perfection.

During a "dry-sighting" practice in the main gym, Co-captains Bill Collier (standing) and Bill Enos (kneeling) check the alignment of their sights. High scorers on the team, the boys scored 537 of the 1044 points tallied by the Cavaliers in their victory over Falls Church.

As his T. C. Williams opponent tries hopelessly for a reversal, Tom Ford (112 lb. class) grips the struggling athlete and prepares to slam him to the mat for a pin. Tom had a quite successful season finishing with a 7-5-0 record.

After turning the tide on his Colonial adversary, John Pitas (120 lb. class) puts the pressure on as the referee watches for the pin. John along with Bob Elmore, who compiled a 33-1 record over a two year period and was undefeated this season, and eight other Woodson wrestlers competed in the regional match of the northern district.

SWIM TEAM

Tension increased as the swimmers stepped up on their starting blocks. The gun cracked, and almost simultaneously the bodies slapped the water. Amid the cries of excited spectators, Woodson swimmers scored an overwhelming victory over Falls Church to bring the close to our third undefeated season.

The Woodson Swim Team owed its success to the vigorous weekly workouts at the Starlit Swimming Pool. Besides competing with area high schools, Woodson swimmers participated in interstate competition, traveling to several schools, including East Carolina University, Georgetown Prep, and the University of North Carolina.

A true love of swimming was the bond that united the Swim Team and gave them the spirit and willingness to work which competitive swimming requires.

STUDENTS

Younger than a lifetime are we
Older than a nighttime will we be,
Spring will be forever our time,
A time of youth, dreamfilled and kind.

FRESHMEN

Woodson,

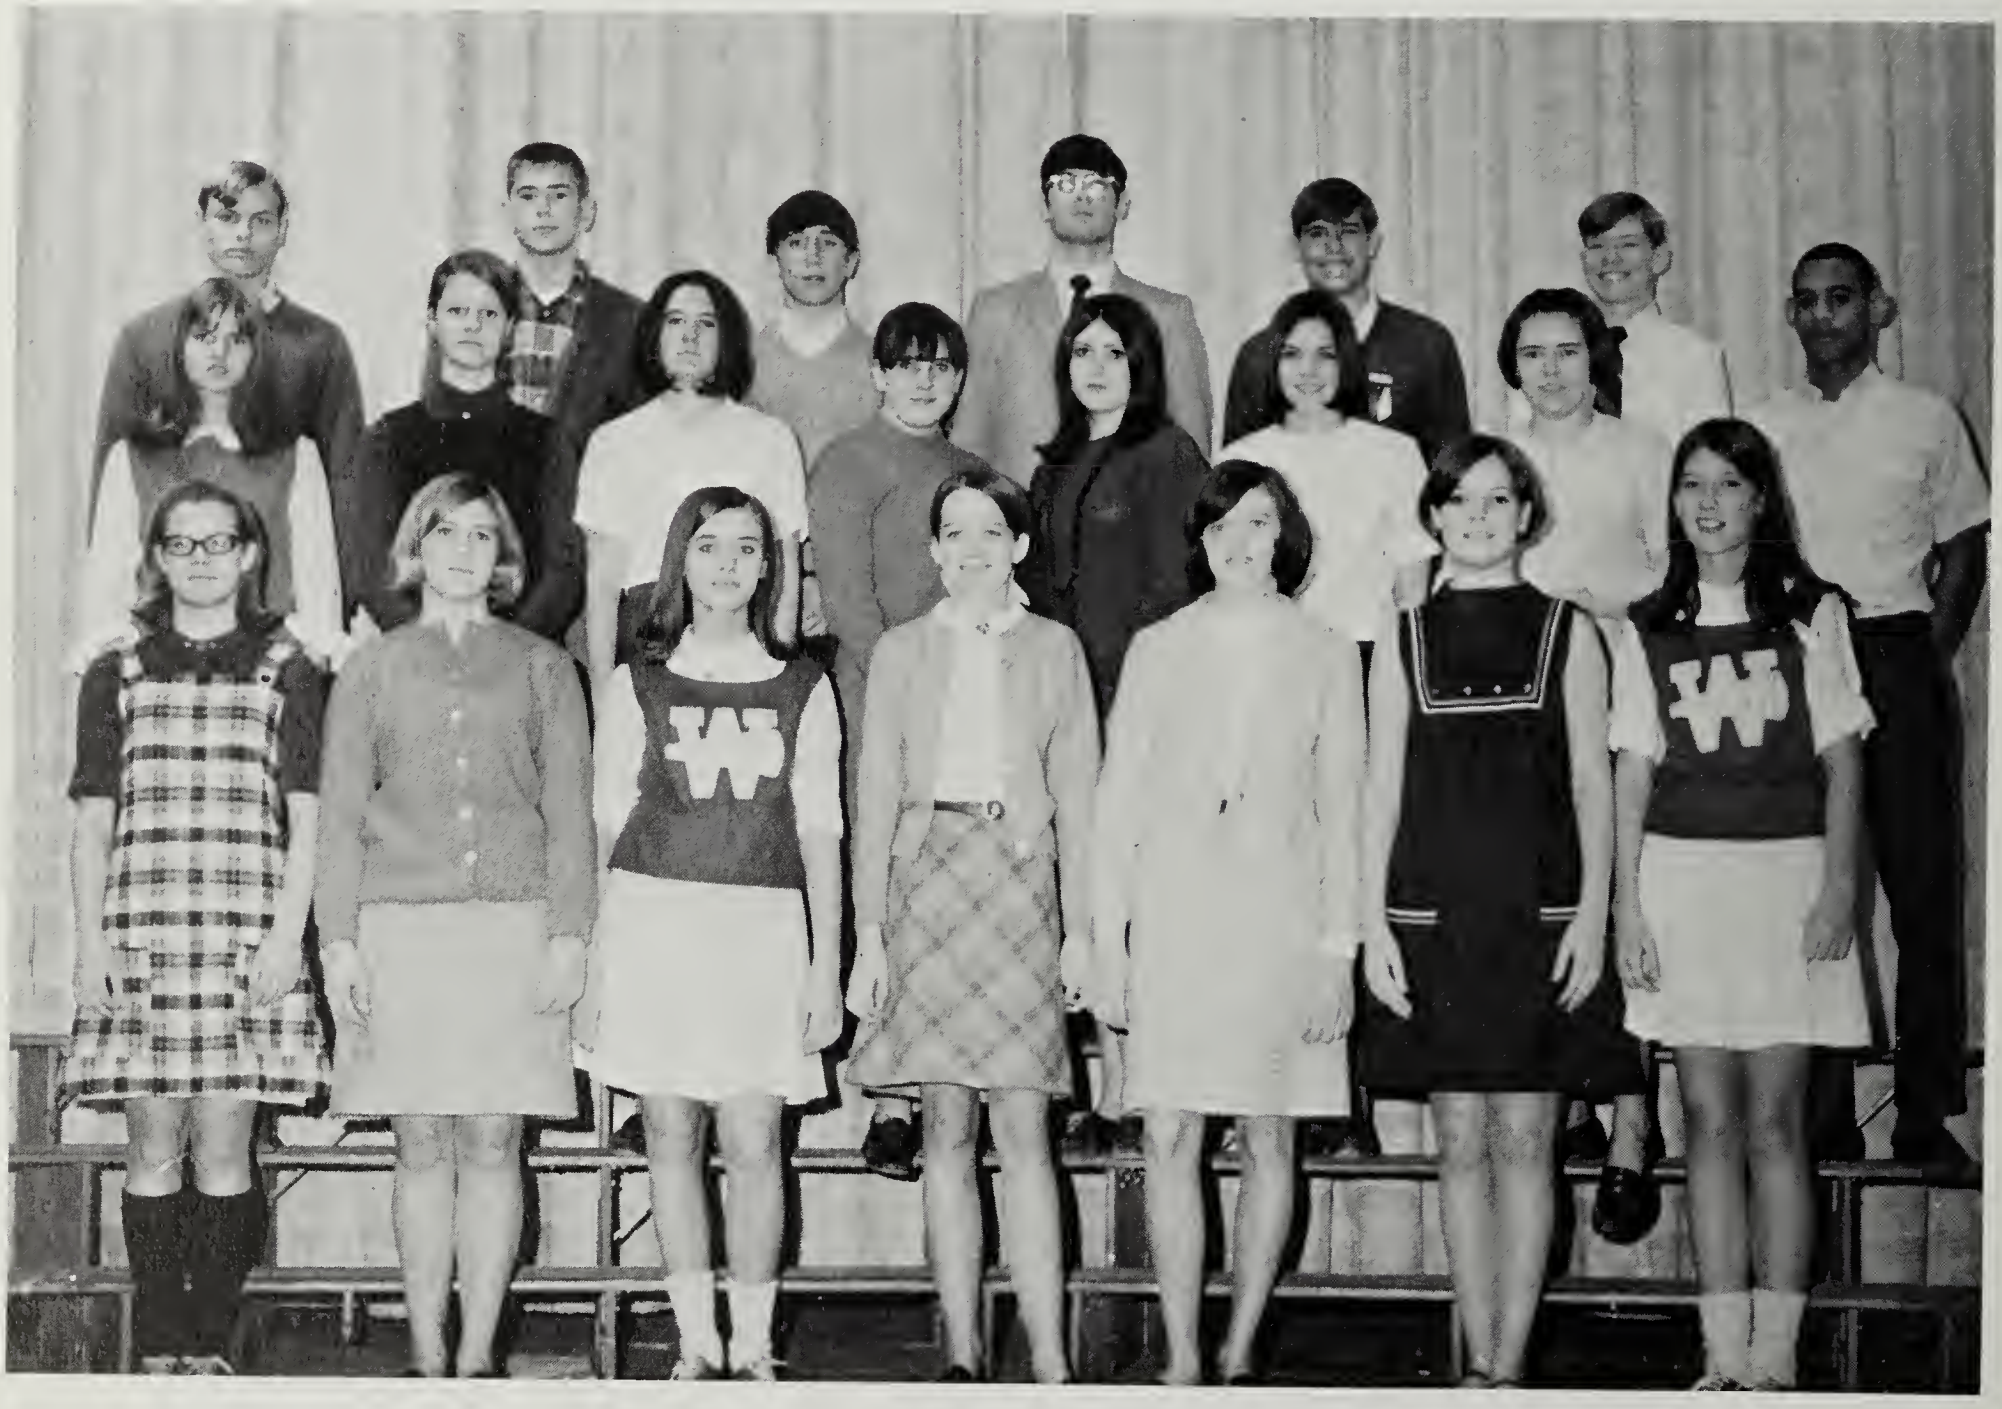

With its varied happenings and memories of years past
Opened its doors to let a new class enter;
To let a new class become a part of the Woodson Way.

The Class of '71, the freshmen,

A bit bewildered,
More than a bit excited,
Waiting for an explanation,
Determined to fit in,
stand out,
do well.

Many times the late buses seem to take forever to come. This student anxiously waits for her's to arrive while everyone else waits inside the warm building.

John Green and Sue Hall put in alot of time and effort to make the registering to vote for freshmen as easy as possible. These freshmen found out how easy and what a small amount of time it takes to register to vote. The freshmen had an exceptionally large turn out, unlike the other classes.

Still Underclassmen

But knowledgeable in the realization that there are no such things as elevator passes,
left-handed baseball bats,
Cafeteria C.

Continuous routine,
One-sided discussions,
Incorrect geometry problems
Dead frogs still responding to tormenting prods.

Filling the empty spans of time with The Hush Dance,
selling food to the Christmas door decorators.
Finally blending into the Woodson surroundings.

Mr. Houlihan, Sophomore Class Sponsor.

An October Wizard firmly attached to a Halloween float,
A cellar filled with spider webs
and Sadie Hawkin's fans,
A beautiful, mystical castle upon whose drawbridge
sweethearts strolled,
The lucky turn of a new class ring,
The Junior Ring Dance,
The realization of being no longer underclassmen but at last rising seniors.

Mr. Kane, Junior Class Sponsor.

SENIORS

The story of the Class of 1968

Success, achievement, leadership,
The Back-to-School Dance,
First prize in the Homecoming Float Competition,
Boat excursions, ski trips,
"Babes in Toyland,"

THE PAJAMA GAME,

The Prom,
Graduation

The turning of backs on high school life,
The searching of the future,
The lingering of memories
Indellible as the names etched in the path
Of the Senior Court.

High School was an experience that
We will all recall with sentiment and smiles
Based on our four years at Woodson
Being young was not a curse . . .
For truly they were four years that Comprised the "Spring of our lives."
